Vandenberg Prods GOP To Vote Aid By April 18

As a Result, Eaton Sets Sights on Final House Action Before Italian Election Date

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg enlisted the help of Republican leaders of the House and Senate yesterday to speed passage of the European recovery bill.

By nightfall there were signs that their combined pressure was begining to work, although the Senate spent another day of listening to speeches without voting on a single amendment.

Here is what happened:

1. In the morning Vandenberg met with Speaker Martin, Majority Leader Halleck and Chairman Eaton of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, to impress the need of quick action upon them. From what others said later, it was apparent that he had warned them of the disastrous consequences if the bill should not be passed before the Italian elections on April 18.

2. Later, after a 2½-hour meeting with the Speaker and with Republican members of his committee, Eaton said his objective was to get the bill passed by April 10, in time "to have a psychological effect on the Italian election." Eaton said his committee "may reconsider" its earlier decision, which he called a tentative one, to wrap up military aid to China, Greece and Turkey into a "single package" bill with ERP. He announced that his committee would start writing a bill on Thursday.

3. Speaker Martin told reporters: "We are going to do everything we can to expedite the bill, and we are going to work overtime to get it ready."

4. On the Senate floor the Republican whip, Senator Wherry of Nebraska, said the Senate would hold night sessions Thursday and Friday and would meet all day Saturday if necessary to pass the bill.

Two other appeals for speed were heard on the Senate side of the Capitol. Secretary of Commerce Harriman, testifying before the Senate Finance Committee, said the delay in passing ERP might make American aid too late to keep communism from overrunning western Europe.

Quarrel Over 'Double-C

D.C. Payroll Band[illegible]atified, Body of Slain Pal Is Found

Baltimore police yesterday held a bullet-scarred man identified in two Washington payroll robberies and questioned him in the death of a former convict near Laurel, Md.

Discovery of the decomposed body of a man believed to be Hunter Lewis, convicted holdup man, touched off investigation of a reported gangland double-cross and gun battle.

Mack Wilson Fierst, 37, was arrested as he walked from a Baltimore drug store, ending a five-month search for him in connection with the $3269 payroll robbery of the Mechanical Contractors Co., in Baltimore.

Object of a Washington police lookout for the $3000 holdup of the Acme Super Market, 1531 F st. ne., and the $7398 robbery of the Darby Printing Co., 2414 Douglas st. ne., Fierst was identified by representatives of both firms.

Metropolitan police said Fierst is linked with the $7576 payroll robbery at the Haynes Lithograph Co., 1140 East-West hwy., Silver Spring, with a $138 holdup of the Miss America candy store, 1306 G st. nw., and a $130 holdup at the Safeway Store, 8th and F sts. ne.

Two Baltimore newsmen found the body in underbrush near Laurel, a bullet hole in the head.

They had been seeking Lewis for information on the reported killing and wounding of two holdup men in a quarrel over a double-cross near Elkridge, Md.

Police theorized that Lewis and an associate quarrelled and shot it out.

Fierst refused to talk. Also known as Joseph Smith and Little Maxie, he even declined to give police his address and denied any connection with the Washington holdups. His car, a 1942 Oldsmobile, had what appeared to be

U.S. Tax Unit Called Lax, Inefficient

House Committee Assails Internal Revenue Bureau; Blames Patronage

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Republican-controlled House Appropriations Committee yesterday charged "glaring inefficiencies" and "loafing on the job" in the Washington office of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

It said patronage has led to laxity and lack of discipline throughout the tax-collecting system, and recommended Congress end political appointment of Internal Revenue collectors and place them under the Civil Service system.

The sharp attack on the bureau and demands for a shake-up were included in a report on a $1,981,722,350 Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill, carrying an actual cash cut of about 1.7 per cent under the President's Budget estimates.

Reduction Recommended

Democrats reserved comment on the Internal Revenue Bureau blast, but in turn opened fire on the GOP reductions in the bill.

Representative Albert Gore (D., Tenn.) charged actual reductions were less than four tenths of 1 per cent if $3,313,584,430 in trust fund appropriations and $5,877,868,083 in general and special funds were added to the total of the bill.

"That's the smallest reduction over made in an appropriation bill during my time in Congress," Gore said.

"At this rate, Republicans haven't a chance to make good on their pledge to cut the budget 2½ billion dollars."

In actual cash outlays to run the two departments the committee recommended $290,453,100 for the Treasury, a cut of about 5.6 per cent, and $1,691,269,250, a reduction of only 1.1 per cent.

Tax refunds, which the committee sharply cut in last year's bill, only to confront a deficiency request for their full restoration, were left out of the new bill pending congressional tax reduction action.

Washington Office Cut

If a tax cut becomes effective, retroactive to January 1, tax refunds will shoot upward with a resulting increase in that item.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue, singled out for a special investigation by the committee's staff and a knuckle-rapping attack in the report, received $186,736,000, a cut of $1,264,000.

Un-American Group Receives $200,000 To Continue Work Despite Attacks

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Despite a series of rough attacks on the methods and procedures of its Committee on Un-American Activities, the House of Representatives yesterday overwhelmingly voted $200,000, a doubled appropriation, for the committee's work this year.

The committee itself, meanwhile, continued in its investigation of the loyalty of Dr. E. U. Condon. It subpenaed the Undersecretary of Commerce and two other department officials to appear before it today in closed sessions.

Yesterday it had heard three other Federal officials, associated with the Commerce Department loyalty board. That body last month cleared Condon, the director of the National Bureau of Standards, of all doubts as to his loyalty.

Robert E. Stripling, chief investigator for the House committee, said there would be no statement on the Condon matter until all the questioning in the secret sessions had been completed.

May Issue Statement Today

Stripling indicated that if all the witnesses were heard today and the committee then had a complete picture of the entire case, it would thereupon issue a statement.

The witnesses who appeared yesterday were Adrian Fisher, former chairman of the Commerce loyalty board; Oliver E. Short, department personnel director, and John L. Towne, board secretary.

Those summoned for questioning this morning are Undersecretary William C. Foster; department solicitor Issac P. Stokes; a department investigator, Thomas Scanlon; and a shorthand reporter at one of the loyalty board's sessions on Condon, Walter R. Swank.

The vote to double the committee's funds for this year was 337 to 37, with only one Republican Representative Javits (N. Y.), among the opponents of the grant.

Committee Rouses Criticism

But in an hour's debate preceding the vote, the committee harvested considerable criticism even from those who announced they would support its appropriation.

Representative Buck (R., N. Y.) drew a hearty round of applause when he said he would vote for the funds but that he hoped in the future the committee would "gain is publicity from jobs well done rather than from shouting from the housetops charges they hope to prove."

Virginia Program Also Affected

Supreme Court Ruling to Halt Montgomery Religious Classes

By Dorothea Andrews and Robert T. Allan
Post Reporter

Two religious education classes in nearby Maryland will be abolished and a program of interdenominational religious education in Virginia may have to be abandoned because of the Supreme Court ruling Monday outlawing religious classes in public schools.

First opinion is that the District public school system will not be noticeably affected by the ruling.

As educators and religious leaders studied implications of the plan, E. M. Douglass, assistant superintendent of Montgomery County Schools, said that he plans to notify principals of two county schools that they must abandon religious education classes now being conducted during regular school hours. These classes are at the Sherwood School at Sandy Spring and the Gaithersburg School.

The Sherwood School religious education class at Sandy Spring, Md., is operated under the sponsorship of the Montgomery County Religious Education Association, and was begun last fall. It is offered to fourth graders at the school once a week.

Details on operation of the Gaithersburg religious education class were not available last night. Douglass told The Washington Post that he believed it was sponsored byy the local parent-teachers association.

G. Gardner Shugart, school superintendent for Prince Georges County, Md., said there is no formal religious education instruction in the county scholos. He added, however, that in two county towns, Mount Rainier and Brentwood, a policy of granting leave from school to attend religious education classes conducted in local churches has been followed. This leave has been allowed to the extent of one hour a week with written consent of students parents. Shugart said he did not believe the plan would be affected by the court ruling.

TThe Rev. Henry Lee Robison, executive secretary of the Virginia Council of Churches, said in Richmond yesterday that a total of 67,131 pupils in Virginia public schools may be affected by the court's ruling.

The Virginia Council of Churches has sponsored interdenominational religious education in Vrginia public schools since 1930. Robison, who said the council is trying to get a full text of the court's opinion in order to determine the scope of its meaning, said that if the program had to be abandoned, it not only would mean stopping religious instruction in the public schools to the 67,131 pupils involved, but would affect 102 teachers.

Most persons who have studied the Supreme Court opinion believe that it will not affect the use by

Early Tally Shows Extremely Close Fight for State's 8 GOP Delegates

BULLETIN

Concord, N. H., March 9 (AP).—Supporters of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey led in seven of eight delegate races with close to a third of the precincts counted tonight in the New Hampshire Republican presidential primary—first in the Nation this year.

Republican National Committeeman Frank Sulloway, who ran himself on a slate favorable to Harold E. Stassen, said the New York Governor appeared sure of winning at least five—and probably six of the eight delegates.

Concord, N. H., March 9 (AP). Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York and Harold E. Stassen tonight were running neck-and-neck in the early count for New Hampshire's eight delegates in the first Republican presidential primary race of the 1948 campaign.

They were the only outright contenders for the four delegates chosen at large and the two elected in each of the State's congressional districts in today's balloting

The count in 53 of the State's 298 precincts saw the Dewey slate holding a slight edge. Five delegates pledged to him were out front, two at large and three in the districts.

Few Reports from Cities

Most of the early returns were from country towns—only a few city precincts from Nashua and Laconia being included in the count.

Dewey men were running one-two in the race for four delegates-at-large seats—former Gov. Robert O. Blood setting the early pace, with 1888 votes and Gov. Charles M. Dale close to him with 1816.

Stassen delegates were holding on to the next two places—former Representative Foster Stearns with 1424 votes; and former National GOP Committeeman Robert Burroughs in fourth place wiht 1382.

Precincts in New Hampshire are individual towns or wards of cities.

A heavy vote—probably 55,000—turned out as sunny skies made weather conditions ideal.

Dewey and Stassen are the only Republican presidential aspirants to enter slates. President Truman is unopposed for the Democratic Party indorsement.

Stassen Strong in Roxbury

Stassen showed strength in the farm town of Roxbury in southern New Hampshire—a region he stumped only a week ago—as his slate scored almost a clean sweep.

The village of Harts Location in the White Mountains gave Dewey delegates the edge—by a narrower margin.

Eight Republican delegates will be chosen—four elected at large, two in each of the State's two congressional destricts.

Politicians debate whether the New Hampshire primaries can be taken as a trend. Nearly all agree, however, that a clear-cut victory for either Dewey or Stassen would give their tub-thumpers ammunition for the next primary in Wisconsin April 6.

Political observers here look for a possible mixed State delegation. They point out that often times the personal popularity of the respective delegates plays a part in presidential primaries as important as the popularity of the candidates they represent.

Even as the first returns were counted, the Lewey and Stassen campaign managers were standing by their earlier predictions.

Dewey forces claim seven out of eight; Stassen at least five out of eight.

Privately, Stassen managers say the former Minnesota Governor will make an impressive showing if he lands three.

The guards took them to a control point in the woods and held them until midnight. Then they were taken to Koenstang and placed in a German hotel for the night under armed guard. The next day they were transferred to Weimar.

There an English-speaking Russian officer began to question them. When Van Street replied that he was a lawyer, he was taken to a Russian court for further interrogation. In 30 minutes he returned and both couples were taken to a hotel. They were given rooms, gasoline and food and spent the night there as guests of the Russians.

This morning, the spokesman said, their Russian hosts told them

Nation Starts Regearing Its Draft Machine

Aim Is 'Reasonable Preparedness,' Says Hershey, OSSR Head

San Francisco, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—A Nation-wide regearing of the machinery of Selective Service to provide "reasonable preparedness" in case of future need is under way, Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national director of the Office of Selective Service Records, disclosed today.

Hershey and his aide, Col. George A. Irvin, training division chief of the OSSR, revealed that meetings of State and national selective service officials in three regions already have led Kentucky and other States to voluntarily adopt programs reorganizing their World War II draft boards.

Discussing All Phases

He disclosed that meetings held during the past three months, or to be conducted in the remainder of the six Selective Service regions throughout the Nation, are discussing "all phases of mobilization."

"It's simply a matter of reasonable preparedness," Hershey said.

Discussion subjects include national registration, universal military training and requirements for total mobilization, Hershey said.

"We are discussing procedures on which the Selective Service would be based in event of emergency," he said following a meeting with Army, Navy and Marine Corps officials and Selective Service directors of the eight western States in the Sixth Army Zone.

Irvin said the OSSR is holding six meetings across the Nation, one in each army area, "to formulate plans in event Selective Service has to be put into effect again."

Each Two Weeks Long

Each meeting is two weeks long, he said, and involves calling Army, Navy and Marine reserve officers earmarked for selective service to active duty for that period.

The Sixth Army Zone meeting opened today in Stilwell hall at the Presidio with 375 Army, 100 Navy and 60 Marine Corps officers in attendance. San Francisco was the third regional meeting.

Irvin denied that the conferences were "of any emergency nature."

Truman Told Steelman to Snub Subpena

Notifies Hoffman Why He Was Absent From GSI Hearings

By Frank Wilder
Post Reporter

Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman notified Representative Clare E. Hoffman (R., Mich.) yesterday that President Truman instructed him to ignore two subpenas to attend GSI strike hearings.

The White House aide tossed back both subpenas to Hoffman's Education and Labor Subcommittee with the note explaining his failure to appear at the hearings.

Hoffman, releasing the text of the note, immediately announced he would go ahead with his plan to turn over the case to the full committee. As chairman of the subcommittee investigating the GSI strike, Ho man contends that Steelman, the President and others in the Administratoin are "bypassing" the Taft-Hartley Act in attempts to settle the 65-day-old strike.

Could Have "50 Assistants"

Admitting receipt of the subpenas—one for a hearing Saturday afternoon, the other for Monday night—Steelman wrote to Hoffman:

"As you know, my official duties are to advise and assist the President of the United States. After the receipt of each of the subpenas, I promptly informed the President, and in each instance the President directed me, in view of my duties as his assistant, not to appear before your subcommittee."

Whether presidential assistants are exempt from congressional subpenas, Hoffman could not say. But he did suggest:

"If presidential advisers are exempt, then —my God!—he could have 50 of them down there. He has them in mobs. Maybe all these GSI strikers are his advisers too."

More concrete was the opinion of Representative Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.), author of "Cannon's Rules" for the House:

"Congress can subpena anybody, but out of consideration of his high office, the President has never

Backers Urge Congress Call To MacArthur

Rep. Miller Invites General to Testify On Japanese Matters

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Backers of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, now a receptive candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, have started a movement to bring him to the United States this spring.

Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) said yesterday that he had cabled MacArthur in Tokyo, asking him to come to Washington and testify before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

"I am rather inclined to think he will accept and probably come back for just a few days," Miller said. "I think he ought to. I think it's difficult for Congress to legislate on matters concerning Japan without having the man here that is running the show."

Representative Miller said he would ask Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.), chairman of the Appropriations Committee, to invite General MacArthur to testify.

Bridges, who was at home for the New Hampshire primary election yesterday, told the United Press that a lot of pressure was being exerted on him to issue such an invitation. He said he would not do it on his own, but would put the question up to the full committee.

General MacArthur's announcement Monday that he would be available for the Presidency if "called by the American people," coming as it did on top of President Truman's announcement that he would accept and run if nominated by the Democrats, gave political Washington plenty to talk about yesterday.

Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, set out last night to try and put heart in the Democrats.

In a speech before the Philadelphia Bulletin Forum, McGrath said of Mr. Truman:

"He will be the Democratic nominee in 1948 and will be returned to the White House in November by a vast upsurge of voters

Australia Bars Japanese Wives Of Her Soldiers

Canberra, Australia, March 9 (AP). Immigration Minister Arthur Calwell announced today Japanese brides of Australian soldiers or civilians will not be permitted to enter Australia. He also banned children of such unions.

He made this comment on reports that some Australians in Tokyo wish to bring home their Japanese wives:

"No Australian soldier or civilian who contracts marriage in the Shinto temple or the Christian church with a Japanese woman will be allowed to bring her to Australia.

"Any Australian who has contracted an alliance with a Japanese woman can live with her in Japan, and no obstacles will be raised against his securing passport facilities to leave this country. He will not be allowed to bring his wife or any child of the union to Australia."

'Persecuted,' Three Dairies Say In Denying Price-Fix Charges

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Three more dairies here yesterday denied any action to fix milk prices or restrain dairy trade as charged in an indictment returned by a special grand jury on Monday.

Thompson's Dairy, Wakefield Dairy and Alexandria Dairy joined Safeway Stores' Lucerne Milk Co. and Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy in denying the antitrust charges.

Others indicted—Harvey Dairy of Hyattsville, Md., Richfield Dairy, the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association and its secretary-treasurer, Bruce B. Derrick—have not yet commented.

The defendant dairies, which distribute 88 per cent of this area's milk, and the producers' association which supplies 80 per cent of area milk, are accused of agreeing to fix milk prices and restrain trade with exclusive agreements aimed at controlling the milk market, and of other alleged practices.

In their statements, several defendant dairies stated a belief that they were being "persecuted" for actions previously approved by Federal milk marketing orders.

This revolves around the charge that the dairies pay for milk, not on the basis of its form as supplied to them, but according to whether it is sold by the dairies in one of three "artificial" classes—fluid milk, cheese or fluid cream, and skim milk or cream for processing.

This classification system was included in the Federal milk marketing order which the producers' association decided to abandon on April 1, 1946. Under it, milk prices to farmers dropped during "flush" production periods, and increased when supply was tight.

Can Dwarf Uranium Power

Mighty Mesons Now Created, Marking New Atom Milestone

Berkeley, Calif., March 9 (AP).—Atomic science got off to an exciting new start today with man-made mesons, mighty particles which heretofore have been produced only by nature.

The achievement ends a notable race among scientists in America, Europe and perhaps elsewhere. They agreed that artificial production of a meson would be the greatest thing in atomic research since the discovery of uranium fission in 1939, which led to the atom bomb.

Production of mesons in the laboratory for the first time was announced yesterday by Dr. Ernest O. Lawrence, famed atom smasher, and James B. Fisk, research director of the Atomic Energy Commission.

The particles, which may point the way to atomic energy far greater than that produced by the atom bomb, were produced in the University of California's 4000-ton cyclotron.

Dr. Lawrence said laboratory mesons will give scientists their best tool for finding out just what particles there are in the nuclei of atoms. However, there will be no immediate practical application, he added.

Dr. Lawrence, giving credit to his staff and to British researchers, termed the accomplishment "one of the great milestones of all time in fundamental atomic research."

In nature mesons come from the upper air. Presumably they are born when the nucleus of a speeding hydrogen atom hits an atom of oxygen or some other matter in the air and explodes it. Mesons are products of these explosions. Some have been rated as having energies of hundreds of billions of volts. The energy produced in uranium atom explosions is only 200 million volts.

The cyclotron mesons are feeble ones—only about four million volts. Bigger atom smashers will be needed to produce the more powerful ones, Dr. Lawrence said.

School Bonds Sold By Prince Georges

New York Syndicate Buys Issue Of $2,000,000 in School Buildings

Bonds totalling two million dollars to finance the 1948 school building program in Prince Georges County, Md., were sold yesterday by the Prince Georges County Board of Education.

Successful bidders were a group of financial houses, Phelps, Fenn & Co. of New York City and Ferris & Co. and Associates of New York. Their bid provided for an interest rate of 2.7531 per cent. The issue is to be retired $100,000 annually over 20 years.

The program includes construction of a new senior high school and vocational training center at Bladensburg; a senior high school in the Hyattsville-University Park area, a combination junior-senior high school in Fairmont Heights, and four-room additions to the Douglass High and Elementary School at Upper Marlboro, Lakeland High School near Berwyn, Oxon Hill Elementary and Junior High School and finishing of several projects started last year.

Montgomery-Blair Shop Bid Rejected

A lone bid of $19,480 for construction of a shop building at Montgomery-Blair High School, Silver Spring, was rejected yesterday by the Montgomery County Board of Education.

Only one bid was received for the project, officials said, and they explained that the Cramer-Vollmerhausen Co. bid "greatly exceeded" the money allotted for the building.

At its regular meeting the board also received a delegation from the Montgomery County Education Association on the subject of possible adjustments in salary scales of professional and non-professional employes.

A request of the Montgomery County Junior College for a summer session starting June 14 and closing August 7 was approved by the board. An estimated 250 students will enroll.

who are interested in a government of progressive liberalism."

McGrath then gave Henry A. Wallace and his third party a rough going-over, one that appeared to recognize the impossibility of the Iowan's return to the Democratic Party.

Irresponsible, He Says

Accusing Wallace and "his Communist cohorts" of "irresponsibility," McGrath went on to say:

"A Henry Wallace can condemn the bi-partisan foreign policy and offer nothing more than abject appeasement to the forces of Godless communism.

"A Henry Wallace can condone the enslavement of a Hungary and a Czechoslovakia, rationalizing the loss of a nation's liberty by a series of words that mean nothing."

McGrath said that Wallace and the Communists on the left and the Republicans on the right both deny responsibility on the one hand and lay it upon the Democratic Party with the other.

"They do not need to be responsible," he said. "They need only say what is politically expedient at the moment, ignoring the situation, the facts and history."

Attack Taken for Granted

That President Truman will tear into Wallace eventually is taken for granted by Democratic strategists. However, they do not expect him to open up until after the Democratic National Convention in July.

The effect of MacArthur's entry into the Republican race was the subject of considerable speculation yesterday. On only one thing were observers agreed, and that was that he would run very well in the April 6 primary in his home State of Wisconsin.

Some members of the Wisconsin delegation in Congress predicted that RacArthur would make a "sweep" of the State's 27 delegates to the Republican National Convention, white-washing the other two entries, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York and former Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota. The Dewey and Stassen people disputed this, naturall, but it was plain that they were worried.

Vandenberg Praise Recalled

An article written for Colliers by Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan in 1944, booming MacArthur for the GOP nomination that year, promises to be a valuable piece of campaign material for the famous soldier's backers.

Representative Miller, in a radio interview yesterday with William Hillman, White House reporter for the Mutual Broadcasting System, recalled the Vandenberg article and quoted the Michigan statesman as saying:

"If MacArthur is nominated he will be elected and if elected he will bring a great mind, a great heart, a great capacity, a great devotion to the proud leadership of a great Nation."

Hillman asked the Nebraska Congressman what he thought Vandenberg might say today.

Still Approves of Him

"Well, bless your heart," Miller replied, "I just had a letter from the Senator within the last few weeks and he still approves of General MacArthur. He said that he shares with me my great admiration for General MacArthur."

Friends of Vandenberg, a formidable dark horse in this year's GOP picture, said Miller had asked that the Foreign Relations Committee invite MacArthur to testify on the Marshall Plan and China relief. They said that Vandenberg, in writing to Miller, had merely agred with him that MacArthur would make a very competent witness.

These friends said further that 1948 was not 1944, and they recalled that one of the chief reasons that Vandenberg wanted MacArthur to run four years ago was that Franklin D. Roosevelt was asking for a fourth term in his role as Commander-in-Chief. He thought that MacArthur would seem an even more attractive commander-in-chief and would be able to beat FDR at the polls.

2d U. N. Team Fired on by Greek Rebels

Athens, March 9 (U.P.).—A second United Nations observation team has been fired on by guerillas in northern Greece, this time in the Delvinakion sector close to Albania, Greek press reports said today.

Some stories said the team was machinegunned from Albanian territory last night. Others said the observers were subjected to mortar fire from Albania.

There were no casualties, the reports said. The U. N. observers, the dispatches added, spent three days in the frontier aea, investigating alleged movements of Greek rebels across the border.

A U. N. spokesman in Athens announced yesterday that guerillas had shelled a U. N. jeep at Kilkis, at the other end of Greece's northern boundary, directly south of the Yugoslav-Bulgarian border.

Archbishop Damaskinos cabled United Nations at Lake Success, the World Council of Churches and the U. N. Balkans Commission at Salonika, asking their help in halting seizure of children by guerillas in northern Greece.

Reports from Rhodes, in the Dodecanese Islands, said Queen Frederika had arranged for the transfer there of children reportedly threatened with kidnapping.

China Blast Fatal to 100

Shanghai, March 9 (A.P.).—A big Chinese ammunition dump blew up at Tsingtao today, taking a toll of possibly 100 dead and 150 injured at that base of the United States far-western Pacific fleet.

The Navy said first reports made no mention of American casualties. Presumably the victims are Chinese.

The blast flattened an entire city block.

Only a half-mile away the U.S.S. Estes, flagship of the Western Fleet, and the hospital ship Repose were tied up at the dock.

All available Navy medical facilities, both ashore and on the Repose, were brought into play.

The Navy said no United States buildings were damaged.

Eisler Carrying Cane as Protection Against Children

New York, March 9 (U.P.).—Gerhart Eisler, labelled by the Government the No. one Communist in the United States, appeared in court today carrying a heavy cane.

He explained that he carried it for protection. Eisler said that he had been subjected to torment, particularly from children, since the charges of his political affiliation were made. The windows of his home now are heavily screened, he said, because the children in his neighborhood constantly pelt them with snowballs.

People are forever telling him he should go to Russia, he said, and recently when he returned home an 8-year-old girl yelled:

"You should be exterminated."

Eisler appeared with three other defendants for a hearing in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals on arguments on writs of habeas corpus. For the second time, the case was postponed for a day because of the heavy court calendar. Eisler now is free on bail pending this hearing and one seeking to deport him as an undesirable alien.

Paroles Held Revokable for Capone Pals

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A Justice Department ruling under which four paroled Capone gangsters can be sent back to prison was disclosed yesterday by Daniel M. Lyons, chairman of the United States Board of Parole.

Lyons told the House Committee on Executive Expenditures that the board would reopen the case of the four mobsters paroled last summer after serving one-third of a 10-year sentence for extorting $1,000,000 from the movie industry.

The committee, which has been holdings hearings on the gangsters' release, has produced evidence showing that at least three of the four failed to give full previous arrest records as required in parole applications.

Lyons said that T. Vincent Quinn, assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division, has held that if material deception were practiced on the board, the paroles could be revoked.

Lyons agreed last week to seek a Justice Department ruling, after he and a fellow board members, Fred S. Rogers, admitted the Board of Parole had been "a little hasty" in releasing the four thugs.

Third Ready to Concur

The third member, Boleslau J. Monkiewicz, testified yesterday he would concur if the other two agreed the paroles should be revoked.

The four gangsters are Philip D'Andrea, Louis Campagna, Paul Ricca and Charles Gioe.

Paul S. Dillon, one-time campaign manager for President Truman, yesterday denied he had used his White House connections to get the four paroled.

Angrily charging the committee with conducting a political investigation, Dillon acknowledged that the wife of one of the paroled gangsters had paid him a $10,000 legal fee in connection with the paroles.

Two former Illinois slot machine operators, friends of the paroled men, took the stand to deny that they had ever raised any funds in connection with the paroles or in connection with a settlement of the income taxes levied against one of the four.

One of the two, Francis Curry, of Joliet, Ill., described himself as a farmer, operating about five farms in and near Joliet.

Doesn't Actually Work Farms

He didn't actually work the farms, himself, said Curry, whose pale olive skin, and red-rimmed sunken eyes gave little evidence of much sunlight. Under questioning Curry said he was also in the horse-race handbook and the juke box business.

He used, he said, to be a partner in a slot machine enterprise, which he admitted was illegal in Illinois.

Was the slot machine business profitable, inquired, Chairman Clare Hoffman (R., Mich.).

"Yeah," drawled the witness, "or I wouldn't have been in it."

Curry was questioned about the payment of a $15,000 legal fee to Maury Hughes, a Dallas (Tex.) attorney, in connection with the quashing of a second indictment against the four mobsters.

Hughes, a lifelong friend of Attorney General Tom C. Clark, had previously told the committee he received his fee from a mysterious "Mike Ryan," whom he described as a dapper, slender, soft-voiced man about 55, with an olive complexion and receding hair, who wore a large diamond on his little finger.

Knows Nothing of Mike Ryan

Curry, who gave his age as 45, has an olive skin and thinning dark hair, is dapper and soft-voiced and wears a large diamond on his little finger, swore he knew nothing about the mysterious "Mike Ryan," or the payment of the fee to Hughes. He said he had been in Dallas.

Hoffman disclosed during the hearing that the FBI has been asked to find and identify "Mike Ryan" whom Hughes described.

Stating that he was trying to find out how Louis Campagna, one of the paroled mobsters, got the money to settle a $480,000 income tax claim for $177,000, Hoffman asked Curry if he would disclose his income for the past few years.

"Yeah, I'll get the figures," Curry said. "You can get them anyway from my income tax returns."

"Oh no, we can't," retorted Hoffman," the Bureau of Internal Revenue just won't give them to us."

"Oh, they won't," said the witness. "Well, they must have a pretty good reason, so I'll go by that. Naw, I won't give them to you, either."

"Could Save a Lot of Time"

Stating that he could save the committee "a lot of time," Curry swore he had not seen ane penny of sthe $177,000 in greenback which suddenly appeared on the desk of an attorney for Campagna for settlement of the gangster's income tax.

Curry Authored Letter

Curry was the author of a stirring letter recommending that the four mobsters be let out of jail. Abashed parole board members last week admitted they had never looked up the record of the "farmer" who wrote them such a glowing tribute to his friends.

Willie Heeney, 61, a citizen of Cicero, told the committee he was no farmer. A native of Missouri, he operates "two places" in Cicero—El Patio and the Austin Club. By some strange coincidence, both were raided last week, he testified.

One-time partner of Campagna in the slot-machine business, Heeney said he had known Al Capone personally.

Like Curry, Heeney denied raising any funds for Campagna's income tax or for the parole expenses of the four.

He denied knowing Hughes, but said he knew Dillon. He said he met the politician at the funeral of Edward (Putty Nose) Brady, and that Dillon since had stopped in a few times at his Cicero taverns. He never discussed the paroles with Dillon, Heeney swore.

Southerners Step Up Drive Against Civil Rights Plans

Southern Democrats yesterday responded to the President's "hat-in-the-ring" announcement, without retreat from his civil rights stand by stepping up their offensive against the program.

Senator James O. Eastland (D., Miss.) introduced a series of amendments designed to apply to any anti-lynching legislation enacted to big city crimes, gangster murders and picket line violence.

Eastland never mentioned President Truman by name, but told the Senate:

"What the people of this country want more than anything else is a man . . . who will not sacrifice the good of the country for personal gain from organized pressure groups."

War Danger Cited

He said Congress is being asked "to drop important things" and take up civil rights legislation when it is "on the verge of war." He sai dthe country needs as President "a man who can unite the country against a common foe"—Russia.

Senator Stennis (D., Miss.) meanwhile told reporters he will request the full Senate Rules Committee this morning to delay action on a subcommitte-approved antipoll tax measure until it has held full public hearings.

Senator William E. Jenner (R., Ind.), subcommitte chairman, said his group acted without hearings because Congress has thoroughly considered the legislation in the past. Senator C. Wayland Brooks (R., Ill.), whose full committee meets today, said he personally agreed with Jenner.

If the full rules group proceeds without hearings Southern Senators are expected to start "one hour a day" speeches in the Senate airing arguments against the bill. Attorneys general of seven Southern antipoll tax States have been requested to prepare constitutional arguments against the bill for Senate use, it was learned.

Other Dixie Repercussions

There were these Dixie repercussions in the House:

1. Representative John Bell Williams (D., Miss.) told the House President Truman should "quit now while he is still just 20 million votes behind." Said Williams, "According to (Democratic National Chairman) McGrath, the President has been very fair in stating specifically what he wants. He wants the civil rights program passed; he wants the South throttled, and most of all he wants to be President again. Now Southern Democrats are going to play fair with the President and tell him he is not going to get a thing that he asked for."

2. Representative L. Mendell Rivers (D., S. C.) wrote Gael Sullivan, executive director of the Democratic National Committee, he could not come to a cocktail party for the Democratic executive committee tomorrow. Rivers said he couldn't come to the party "in view of recent developments concerning President Truman, coupled wit hthe joint statement by you and Chairman McGrath yesterday, with reference to President Truman's candidacy" and because Truman "rubbed salt in the wounds" of the South.

Eastland's Proposals Outlined

Eastland's four proposed amendments to the antilynching bill, now spearheading the civil rights program, would tighten the bill to give it general application against all forms of violence and punish officials everywhere who fail to prevent it.

They would:

Make Government law enforcement agencies and officers liable for $2000 to $10,000 damages for injuries or death resulting from race riots, with the Justice Department charged with bringing suits in behalf of those injured.

Make the term "lynching" include murder and other felonies resulting from unlawful violence by one or more persons, including those "commonly designated as gangsters or racketeers."

Define mob violence to include interference by three or more persons with the "right to work" during a labor dispute.

Subject a peace officer "who neglects or refuses to make diligent efforts" to solve a crime to a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $5000 fine.

1-Year Sentence Opens Neilson's Drive on Crime

Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson warned yesterday he will crack down on "hoodlums" from now on to prevent continuance of a "crime wave" in the District.

Leroy S. King, 23, of 211 N st. nw., had been found guilty of attempted housebreaking and carrying a dangerous weapon. Judge Neilson was informed that two weeks before the crime King had been paroled from a term for housebreaking.

Before sentencing King the judge remarked:

"There seems to be a crime wave in Washington with the hoodlums taking over. The only language criminals seem to understand is a jail sentence. If they come before me they will be dealt with severely."

King, caught by police January 21 while trying to break into a grocery store at 927 4th st. sw., was sentenced to a year's straight time, six months on each charge.

Delegates Pass Anti-Truman Bill, 74 to 25

Richmond, Va., March 9 (A.P.).—The Virginia House of Delegates today passed Governor Tuck's amended anti-Truman bill, 74 to 25, and sent it to the Senate.

Eight Republican members joined with 17 Democrats against it. The only member not voting was Delegate Samuel D. Rodgers of Petersburg, who is ill.

The amended bill passed today has one main feature. It permits a State Democratic convention to throw Virginia's 11 electoral votes for President and Vice President to someone else if the State party doesn't like the candidates and platform chosen by the Democratic National Convention.

The bill—Governor Tuck's answer to President Truman's civil rights program—was debated for 3 hours and 40 minutes.

Armistead L. Boothe of Alexandria said the bill was legal, in accord with the Constitution, rulings of the Attorney General and the Democratic Party plan of Virginia.

The original Tuck bill would have kept President Truman's name off the ballot in the event he is nominated and opposed by a Virginia Democratic convention. The amended bill, however, would permit the Truman candidacy, or the candidates of any other party, to get on the ballot on petition of any 1000 voters.

Several critical points of law were debated:

1. Would anyone voting for Truman if the Virginia convention instructed its electors against him be eligible for the State primary next year?

Supporters answered affirmatively, citing an opinion by the late Attorney General John R. Saunders, in 1929, after Virginia had gone Republican for Hoover in 1928. He said there was no primary for President and individual Democrats were not bound to support the national party candidate. This opinion was affirmed by Attorney General Staples 10 years later.

2. Would Virginia be bound to support the national party nominees if the State participated in the Democratic National Convention?

House Floor Leader E. Blackburn Moore said Virginia could withdraw from the convention if it did not like the platform proposed for adoption, or the candidates who appeared sure of the nomination.

Wife Obtains Divorce From A. B. Herrington

Chicago, March 9 (A.P.).—Mrs. Zita M. Herrington, 44, today obtained a divorce from Alfred B. Herrington, 41, Washington, public relations officer for the American Federation of Labor.

The suit, alleging desertion, was uncontested. Mrs. Herrington, of Chicago, was awarded the family home, $25 a week support for three children, and $15 a week alimony.

Missouri Vote Case Reopened

By the United Press

The 1946 Kansas City vote fraud case was reopened by the Senate's new super-investigating committee yesterday as part of a broad inquiry into the conduct of the Justice Department and Attorney General Tom C. Clark in election probes.

Chairman Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) said the investigation was decided on by a unanimous, bi-partisan committee vote.

He reported the committee staff has been ordered to collect information on the Kansas City affair, and thereafter the Senators will decide whether public hearings are warranted.

The committee, Ferguson explained, particularly wants to find out why the FBI is forbidden to investigate election frauds "except when ordered and in the manner ordered by the Attorney General."

He said the committee has been informed that in the case of most Federal crimes the FBI is completely free to make any investigation it deems proper.

The Kansas City fraud occured in the 1946 primary election fight between the then Representative Roger C. Slaughter (D., Mo.) and Enos Axtell, who had President Truman's backing in the campaign for the Democratic congressional nomination.

Aid Needed to Balk Hunger, Cripps Says

Action by Congress Anxiously Awaited As British Economy Continues to Sag

London, March 9 (AP).—Sir Stafford Cripps, boss of Britain's economies, laid before his country today the "excessively grim" possibility of hunger and unemployment unless United States aid is approved by Congress.

He listed imports of food and vital raw materials only until the end of June. He said for later months "they have not yet been finally decided."

The Chancellor of the Exchequer said emergency schemes for slashing food and other purchases are already being considered if Marshall Plan fails to arrive. Plans are are also being made for making the most of the money if it becomes available.

Will Cut Imports

"It must be understood," Cripps said, "that if there is no certainty of aid by the middle of this year, the resulting inevitable cuts in imports would affect raw materials as well as food, and so cause serious unemployment."

He said imports from the Western Hemisphere will be cut further.

"The year will beyond doubt be dominated by the decisions of the United States Congress on the grant of aid to Europe for reconstruction," he added. "Without further substantial aid we can have no hope of recovering equilibrium at a reasonable standard of life within the next few years."

His report, in the form of a white paper, showed that British citizens will average only 2681 calories of food daily in the first six months of this year. This compared with 2880 last year and 3000 prewar.

Some Marginal Cases Now

Cripps said this food level has already created some marginal cases in which industrial production fell off for lack of human energy.

The white paper saw unemployment rising from the present 300,000 level to 450,000 by the end of the year.

It set an export rate to be reached by the end of the year equal to a 50 per cent increase over 1938. The goal for an unstinted way of life is a 75 per cent increase.

Cripps foresaw no immediate possibility of restoring convertibility of sterling into other currencies, which was ended last August.

The white paper said risks still exist that the war-battered rail system may break down, which would cause further crackups in the coal, steel and electricity programs.

Cripps estimated that the overall trade deficit would drop to 250 million pounds (one billion dollars) for the year. The deficit was 675 million pounds ($2,700,000,000) in 1947.

Britain will have to sell about 220 million pounds (880 million dollars) of her last gold reserves for dollars the first half of the year, he said.

HERTTA KUUSENEN | STELA BLAGOJEVA | ANNA PAUKER

These are three of communism's most active women leaders in Europe today. Hertta Kuusenen, Communist member of the Finnish Parliament and a writer for Communist organs, is one of the most closely watched persons in Helsinki as Finland prepares to negotiate a treaty of friendship and mutual aid with Soviet Russia. Little is known of Stela Blagojeva, except that she operates in Bulgaria and was the Red delegate from that country to the Pan-Slav Congress in Prague, Czechoslovakia, in February. Perhaps the best known of the three is Tovarish Anna Pauker, who has been making history in the underground and in the open for three decades of Balkan politics. Last November she became Foreign Minister of Romania, the only woman Foreign Minister in the world

Premier Heads Left-Tinged Finnish Pact Delegation

Helsinki, March 9 (AP).—President Juho Paasikivi appointed today a leftist-tinged delegation for the talks in Moscow on a Russo-Finnish treaty of friendship and military aid.

The seven-man delegation will be headed by Premier Mauno Pekkala, who was given authority to "sign any documents possibly arising out of the negotiations."

Parliament will have to ratify any pact agreed upon in Moscok. A majority of parties in Parliament oppose a military alliance on the grounds it would put Finland in the Soviet Eastern bloc. Three members of the delegation represent parties which ahe against a military pact.

To Start About March 20

The discussions are expected to begin in the Soviet capital about March 20. Paasikivi agreed to the negotiations yesterday after lengthy consultations with Parliamentay leaners.

A Foreign Office source said all directives to the delegation will come from President Paasikivi, who will be in constant contact with the mission.

Paasikivi is still working on the final draft of the response to Stalin's invitation to open treaty negotiations.

Pekkala is a member of the Social Unitey Party, which has joined with the Communists in a popular front which controls 51 seats in Parliament. Both parties favor signing a pact of friendship and mutual aid with Russia.

The deputy chairman of the delegation is Russian-speaking Foreign Minister Carl Enckell. He is an independent whose attitude toward the treaty has not been publicly stated.

The three delegation members who represent parliamentary groups opposing a military alliance with Russia are Urho Kekkoken, Agrarian; Dr. J. Soederhjelm, Swedish People's Party, and Onni Peltonen, president of the Social Democrats parliamentary group and chairman of Parliament's foreign affairs committee.

Expected to Support Pact

The other two delegation members are Vice Foreign Minister Reinhold Svento, Social Unity, and Minister of Interior Yrjoe Leino, a Communist. They were expected to support the pact.

Most Finns appeared to be sitting back calmly awaiting the outcome of their discussions with the Russians, but the front of the Communists and Social Unity party stepped up their meetings in support of a full friendship and military pact.

A moving spirit in the Communist drive is a 44-year-old woman, Hertta Kuusinen. She is a Communist member of Parliament and the daughter of Otto Kuusinen, president of the Karelian Republic and vice president of the Supreme Soviet.

5-Nation Military Alliance Reported Near at Brussels

Brussels, Belgium, March 9 (AP).—Negotiators at the western European conference were reported tonight to have reached a basis for converting their projected union into a solid five-way military alliance.

Fernand Van Langenhove of Belgium, the presiding officer, denied that the five nations might ask the United States to back the alliance with a guarantee of military aid.

A conference spokesman said the delegates of Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg had agreed on further points of "mutual defense and procedure for consultation."

The British were believed to have received approval from London to yield on their original proposal for a series of two-power military pacts involving all five powers. They were said to have accepted the Benelux (Belgium, Netherlands, Luxembourg) counter-proposal for a single pact binding all five powers.

On the other hand the Benelux countries were understood to have yielded from their initial proposal to limit the alliance to the defense of the five mother countries, excluding their colonies.

A British sources said the delegates were now working on a formula which would recognize that threats outside Europe by other European powers can be at the same time a threat to the peace of Europe.

Mrs. Roosevelt Assailed by Soviet Woman

London, March 9 (U.P.).—A Russian forewoman in a galoshes factory today accused Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt of betraying the principles of the late President and warned her to "halt before it is too late."

The open letter to Mrs. Roosevelt was written by Klavdia Zenova, deputy of the Supreme Soviet of the Russian Federation and forewoman of the Moscow Krasny Bogatyr rubber plant. A Moscow radio broadcast, heard in London, described Miss Zenova as a "top woman producer" who turned out more than her quota of galoshes last year.

"I am not versed in diplomatic pleasantries and I am telling you what is on my mand," she wrote. "It is not worthy of you, the widow of Franklin Roosevelt, to be in the camp of his enemies. In addressing their letter to you, I want to say 'Mrs. Roosevelt, stoy before it is too late.'"

Miss Zenova accused Mrs. Roosevelt of supporting the "disgraceful trade in women and children in the colonies" during the last session of the United Nations General Assembly.

(During the last General Assembly, in debate on "Traffic in women, children and obscene publications," Russia proposed that all nonself-governing territories be required to subscribe to the U. N. convention on such traffic. The United States, represented by Mrs. Roosevelt, opposed the amendment.)

"It seems incredible that you, the widow of the man who was the symbol of democratic America and a great fighter against fascism, could come out in defense of the most degrading and cynical forms of oppression and trampling of human rights," she said. "Yuo are making a common cause with people of the backward and reactionaryviews."

Czechs Hold U. S. Consulate Aide on Espionage Charges

By Seymour Freidin

Prague, March 9 (NYHT).—An employe of the American consulate in Bratislavia, Slovakia, has been arrested, charged with espionage

The announcement today by the Communist-controlled Czechoslovak government gave more concrete form t othe thinly veiled accusations of espionage attributed by the Ministry of the Interior to either Western powers" or "a certain western power."

The consulate employe arrested was Andrew Spiro, who has been employed as a translator at the consulate, which was opened on March 1. Spiro is a Czechoslovak citizen.

The American Embassy here has requested the Czechoslovak Foreign Office to inquire into the case and report the results of its investigation.

As the government also clamps down further on what the people can read, tw omore issues of the Bulletin of the United States Information Service were confiscated today.

They were the issues of March 2 and 5, which contained such reports as American press comments on events in Czechoslovakia and Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett's press conference in Washington last week.

Two more prominent Social Democrats resigned their seats in Parliament today. They were Vojta Benes, older brother of President Edouard Benes, and Dr. William Bernard. Dr. Bernard also was expelled from the party.

Will Permit Refugees To Remain, Clay Says

Berlin, March 9 (U.P.).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American commander in chief, announced today that he will permit refugees from Communist-dominated Czechoslovakia to remain in the United States occupation zone and will refuse any demand that they be sent back.

"We have no intention of searching out Czechoslovak refugees and sending them back," Clay said.

Clay also took the opportunity, at a press conference, to announce that coal production in the Ruhr had now passed 300,000 tons a day for the first time since the end of the war.

U. S. to Ask Russia To Explain Shooting

Vienna, Austria, March 9 (U.P.).—American military authorities said today that they would ask Russia at a four-power meeting Thursday to explain why a Russian guard shot an American soldier for refusing to walk in the gutter where he "belonged."

A Russian guard knocked 18-year-old Pfc. Jack Grunden of Portland, Oreg., down with his gun butt yesterday and then shot him through the back as he lay on the sidewalk.

Doctors said Grunden was improving rapidly but still was in a serious condition.

Col. Bernard Hurless, United States provost marshal, said an official inquiry was beeing rushed to have it ready for the four-power meeting. He said United States authorities were not considering a change in military police arrangements because of the incident.

There is no way to prevent such incidents "except to keep American soldiers off the streets and we are not prepared to do that," he said.

It was learned Lieut. Gen. Geoffrey Keyes, commander of United States troops in Austria, still is considering a formal protest to Russia.

Veteran Sends $1700 By Ordinary Mail

Russia Reports 22% Gain In Industrial Production

Lake Success, N. Y., March 9 (U.P.).—Soviet Russia's industrial production climbed in 1947 to 22 per cent above the level of 1946, a United Nations publication reported tonight.

The U.N. monthly bulletin of statistics, publishing Soviet production figures for the first time, said the 1947 level as reported by Moscow was 3½ per cent above the goal for the year.

By the end of 1947, according to the tables, production had risen to the average quarterly level of 1940, the last year of prewar production in Russia.

Metals and metal products—Substantially ahead of 1946, with pig iron up 14 per cent and steel up 9 per cent.

Fuel and power—Increases of from 12 to 22 per cent recorded for production of coal, petroleum, natural gas and electric power.

Farm machinery—1947 output was double that of the preceding year. Fertilizers climbed by 33 per cent.

Textile—One third higher than in 1946.

Agricultural outlook—Crops output jumped by 48 per cent; overall farm production rose a total of 32 per cent.

Santiago, Chile, March 9 (AP).—The cabinet approved today a decree removing all Communists from government jobs. The government also is considering a law virtually banning the Communist Party.

'Jake the Barker' Loses Freedom Move

Detroit, March 9 (AP).—A move to Free John (Jake the Barber) Factor, convicted Chicago racketeer, from prison was stopped at least temporarily today in Federal Court here.

District Judge Theodore Levin denied factor a writ of habeas corpus by which he sought a review of a one-million-dollar mail fraud charge and ultimately a new trial.

The court ruled "no new facts" had been presented since another Federal Judge in Minnesota turned down a similar plea last September. Defense Counsel James E. Haggerty said the decision probably would be appealed.

New Japanese Premier Picks Rightist Cabinet

Tokyo, March 9 (U.P.).—Premier-designate Hitoshi Ashida has completed formation of a cabinet, considered slightly right of center, it was announced today.

Ashida, leader of the Democratic Party, will hold the premiership and the post of Foreign Minister concurrently.

Building Control Powers Amended By House Group

By the United Press

The House Banking Cobbittee voted tentatively yesterday to end Administration controls over the construction of amusement and recreational facilities.

This was the only action taken as the committee began work on the Senate-approved bill to continue rent controls until April 30, 1949. The present temporary control law expires March 31.

Several amendments are scheduled to be considered today, but Chairman Jesse P. Wolcott, (R., Mich.) predicted that any changes from the Senate version would be minor.

The Senate bill would continue the Administration's control over construction of amusement places.

Interim Government Set Up in East Indies

Batavia, Java, March 9 (AP).—The Dutch formally installed an interim Netherlands East Indies government today and renewed the invitation to the Indonesian Republic to join.

The republic has expressed willingness to participate in the interim government. The Dutch have insisted upon reaching a political settlement through the United Nations good offices commission before making the republic eligible.

House Votes Probe Funds

(D., Okla.), voting for the grant, demanded that Congress make new rules to govern the conduct of its investigating committees. The present method of the committee, he proclaimed, "isn't fair, isn't just, isn't American."

He said Congress should see if "we are going on a witch-hunt, or bordering on one."

'Personal Political Advertising'

Other members charged that the committee had worked up the Condon case for the sake of the publicity in order to gain new appropriations. Representative Sadowski (D., Mich.) spoke of members using the committee investigations for "personal political advertising."

Angriest point of the debate came when Representative Powell, New York's Negro Democratic congressman, said he would begin to support the committee when it looked into such things as "the recent wave of police, lynch murder in Mississippi."

Representative Rankin (D., Miss.) jumped to his feet with a demand that Powell's remarks be stricken from the record. But Speaker Martin (R., Mass.) ruled that Powell was entitled to express his opinion an dthat his remarks had not gone beyond the limits permitted in debate.

Enemy Agents And Atom Bomb

Rankin himself warned that enemy agents were trying to steal the "secret of the atom bomb" and the committee was the one agency which could ferret them out. And Representative Busbey (R., Ill.) said that the vote would be between "communism and Americanism."

Late in the day, after the vote, Representative Holifield (D., Calif.) delivered a 33-page speech in defense of Condon. But he spoke to an almost empty House chamber.

His remarks consisted mainly of a section-by-section analysis of the original report of an n-merican ctivities Subcommittee blasting Condon with charges of association with a Russian sppy and of indiscretion. The report was released eight days ago.

The present report is little more than "regurgitations" of the earlier attacks made last spring and summer, Holifield said. If they were legitimate charges, he asked, why was not action against Condon taken at once by the committee, rather than after the passage of eight months?

Attempt To Discredit Control

Holifield said the current attack was part of a renewed attempt to discredit civilian control of atomic energy and return it to the armed forces' jurisdiction. He said that "rumors are rife that other scientists will be impaled on the spite of such attacks."

Holifield took up the committee's report to see if it justified the charge it made in its preface, that Condon was "one of the weakest links in our atomic security."

A summary of the report's major findings (in boldface) and Holifield's comments on them follow:

The Atomic Energy Commission still carries Condon in "pending status" for clearance to work on atomic matters.

The AEC apparently considers Condon as fit to work on such things for it sends a constant stream of secret papers to him.

Condon was recently invited by the AEC staff to a three-day secret conference at the Oak Ridge atom laboratories. Condon does not have access to material on atomic weapons because his work does not concern them, nor has he sought such access.

A letter from FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover states that Condon was in contact with an individual alleged, by a self-confessed Soviet spy, to have engrade in espionage for the Russians.

The committee did not add a following sentence written by Hoover to the effect that there was no evidence to show that these contracts were related to the alleged agent's espionage activities.

The FBI letter asserts Dr. and Mrs. Condon associated with several persons at the Polish Embassy, among them the wife of the Ambassador, the former counselor, his secretary and a clerk.

Condon denies his or Mrs. Condon's meeting or knowing the ambassador's wife and the clerk. He has not the "slightest idea" of the identity of the alleged spy. He entertained the counselor, Dr. Zlotowski, and his secretary, but other guests on that occasion were Representative Sadowski and a "high" civilian employe of the Navy. Zlotowski was an accredited observer of the atom bomb tests at Bikini. Was everyone who associated with him there guilty of indiscretion or disloyalty?

Condon appointed a Russian-born scientist, D. I. Vinogradoff, as liason officer of the Bureau of Standards. He had been a purchasing agent for the Russians.

Vinogradoff left Russia at the time of the pre-communist Kerensky regime; he was on a purchasing mission for the government resisting the Communists.

Vinogradoff made arrangements with Russian officials for the transmission of books, pamphlets, etc. from the Bureau.

All the documents which the Bureau ever sent abroad were unclassified—i.e., public, and purchasable by anyone. It was Condop, however, who ordered the Russian distribution from the Bureau stopped, toward the end of 1947, because the Russians failed to reciprocate by sending back any of their scientific publications.

Condon is a member of the American-Soviet Science Society, affiliated with the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, an organization declared subversive by the Department of Justice. The Society sent letters to bureau scientists, inviting them to join, because Condon "suggested . . . that you might be interested."

The Society long ago severed connections with the Council. The Rockefeller Foundation is offering to support it with a grant. Its trustees include W. W. Aldrich and John Foster Dulles. In former days when it was affiliated with the Council, the Council's sponsors included three Senators, many famous scientists, etc.

Draft Machine Is Regeared

is reorganizing draft boards. Col. Solon F. Russell, Kentucky director of the Office of Selective Service Records, said a reactivation program was being carried out "as a matter of preparedness," should an emergency arise or Congress pass the UMT bill.

"We have been quietly planning for several weeks," said Maj. Sam Hicks, assistant to Colonel Russell. "Another emergency may come quicker this time."

Orders Are Denied

Hershey and his office in Washington emphatically denied that the Kentucky boards were operating "under orders" from OSSR headquarters.

The director pointed out that all draft boards have been disbanded and it would take an act of Congress to authorize their reactivation.

Irvin pointed out the Kentucky program was activated "on their own hook."

"They decided to organize draft board members of World War II into a 'draft board reserve' on an inactive status," Irvin said.

"Other States also have volunteered to maintain contact and keep themselves informed of OSSR procedure under a similar system," he added.

China Fortress Falls to Reds

Peiping, March 9 (AP).—Szepingkai, Manchurian fortress which withstood all previous assaults, today was reported captured by Communist troops storming south for an attack on Mukden's north gateway.

All Chinese newspaper reports said Szepingkai, 105 miles northeast of Mukden, had fallen. Only the government's Central News Agency insisted the garrison still was fighting.

Government quarters declared the position in Manchuria was improved despite the reversal at Szepingkai. They said a ground supply line to long-isolated Mukden was about to be opened.

Government quarters also claimed a victory in north China. They asserted five Communist regiments were wiped out in a two-day battle 40 miles east of Peiping.

Tax Slash Opposed Now by Harriman

By The Associated Press

Secretary of Commerce Harriman yesterday opposed tax reduction at this time, saying its chief effect would be "to raise demand and thereby prices."

But the United States Chamber of Commerce contended that tax cutting is best insurance at hand against a business slump.

Harriman and Ellsworth C. Alvord, representing the Chamber, gave their views to the Senate Finance Committee. It is nearing the close of hearings on the House-approved $6,500,000,$$$ tax cut bill.

The Senate committee is expected to propose a smaller cut—possibly around $4,500,000,000—in an effort to win Democratic support to override an anticipated veto by President Truman.

Harriman Outlines Views

Joining other members of the Truman Administration talking against the bill, Harriman insisted that business is able to get investment funds now and does not need tax reductions to help it.

"Our economy is still in an inflationary situation and sound policy demands that the level of taxation be maintained," Harriman said, adding:

"The major effect of any lowering of taxes would be to raise demand and thereby prices, rather than to bring forth increased supplies."

Eventually, he said the inflationary pressures "undoubtedly will disappear."

"Tax adjustments will then be necessary and desirable," he added.

European Needs Stressed

Harriman also mentioned the situation abroad as another reason to forge a tax cut now. He said:

"We are in a very serious year in the history of our country. We should guard against a boom and a bust."

"Time s running against us. Delay is causing serious repercussions."

Chairman Millikin (R., Colo.) interjected that if this country is to provide heavy foreign aid "we must let the American people know that we are as solicitous about their pocketbooks as we are about the pocketbooks of the people abroad."

In advance of yesterday's session, Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) said a $4,500,000,000 bill would be "veto proof."

Brooke Johns Urges 'Adequate' Realty Zone Plan

Silver Spring homeowners were urged yesterday by President Brooke Johns of the Montgomery County commissioners to work for enactment of an "adequate" master zoning plan.

At a zoning hearing in the Liquor Dispensary Building, in Silver Spring, Johns said he believed there are "many holes" in the present plan and indicated he was in favor of extending the present commercial area.

"Business and progress must go forward," the board chairman told citizens at the hearing, "and unless the county gets more revenue it will be in serious financial straits."

Johns suggested civic groups approach the Park and Planning Commission on the subject of what he termed "a more adequate plan."

Army Permitted to Fly Southern Battle Flags

By The Associated Press

Battle flags of Confederate regiments will fly again.

President Truman signed yesterday a bill to authorize the carrying of Civil War battle streamers by regiments and other units in the Army.

Army regulations already authorized the placing of streamers or decorations for Federal service on Army flags. The effect of the new law is to authorize the use of streamers which were carried by Confederate regiments.

Harriman said. "Delay is causing serious repercussions."

Senator Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.) told the Senate that "the alternative of the extinction of civilization in Europe is as sure as anything can be" if American help fails to come.

"My plea is for speed in this matter," he said. "There is a deadline set. That deadline is April 18, when the Italian nation holds its elections. That country has made a brave endeavor to meet in letter and spirit the fundamental requirements on which this bill is based.

"The slow progress of this bill is a mutual and international calamity. Hour by hour, day by day, April 18 is hurrying toward us. We cannot delay its implacable advance. We must not fail to do our part long before it reaches us."

is and should be concentrated," but the same item in the District was cut back $530,000. The report said this was because the bureau "did not sufficiently reduce unnecessary and inefficient activities in the Washington office" in making 1948 adjustments.

"The investigators found discipline and administrative control lax in the Washington office of the bureau, and estimated that it is securing no more than six productive hours of work per day, on the average, from its employes," said the report.

"In the face of such conditions, the Congress is urged to appropriate large sums of money to support, in effect, loafing on the job. This is like stoking the furnace while the upstairs windows are open."

It quoted the commissioner as saying he has taken corrective steps "and will take stronger action if necessary." The committee charged lax discipline and administrative control in the Washington offices, but said some of the abuses were due to divided authority.

Patronage Attacked

Hitting political appointment of tax collectors as "the most serious defect," it said:

"The commissioner, who administers the entire bureau, does not have effective control over the collectors throughout the country.

"Whether collectors of internal revenue actively attend to the affairs of their offices or merely bask in their patronage appears to be largely a matter of their own volition."

The report said in one case no action was taken to prosecute an unnamed individual who owed $804,000 in taxes and penalties.

In the Boston office, it said investigators found evidence "highly indicative of violations of the Hatch Act." In Newark, N. J., it said two employes "recently flushed several bundles of income tax records down a drain."

The committee said reports "from the bureau's own files conclusively establish that extreme laxity and gross inefficiency pervade many collector's offices and the action reported thereon by the bureau leads the committee to conclude that the standards of efficiency and administrative control observed by the bureau are entirely inadequate."

It said legislation removing collectors from the patronage system and placing them under civil service would be "a major progressive step . . . even though the administration of the civil service system is badly in need of widespread improvements."

In addition it recommended that the Hoover commission on organization of the executive branch of the Government "undertake a thorough-going analysis of the bureau . . . at the earlist possible moment."

U. S. Has 3.6 Typewriters For Every Steno, Typist

Inserted in the Treasury-Post-office appropriation bill yesterday was a mandatory moratorium on purchase of new typewriters by any branch of the Government during the next fiscal year. The committee said a survey showed the Government last August had 3.6 typewriters for every stenographer, typist and correspondence clerk employed, adding:

"It is obvious that the Government now has more than an adequate supply of typewriters to meet all requirements for the coming year."

been subpenaed. The law doesn't recognize the existence of such positions as those of presidential advisers."

The nearest thing to precedent in the Steelman case was the refusal four years ago of Jonathan Daniels, assistant to President Roosevelt, to reveal "confidential" information to a Senate Agriculture Subcommittee. That conflict between the executive and legislative branches brought a threat of contempt proceedings, but was dissolved when President Roosevelt told Daniels to answer the questions.

Hoffman and the other two subcommittee members—O. C. Fisher (D., Tex.) and Wint Smith (R., Kans.)—decided yesterday morning to postpone any action against Steelman until this morning. When the Steelman letter arrived about 5 p. m., Hoffman said "the only thing to do" was to refer the matter to the full committee.

White House-sponsored efforts to end the picketing of 40 GSI cafeterias in Government buildings, meanwhile, stood stalled at least temporarily last night. On the desk of Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming was a report of hopelessness from Conciliator George E. Strong, whom Fleming appointed to settle the dispute February 16.

Strong tells Fleming in the report, it was learned, that the two deadend obstacles to settlement are (1) GSI refusal to accept a clause in Strong's proposal providing for arbitration by Strong of cases of disputed efficiency of replacement workers as against that of the employes on strike, and (2) the activity of Hoffman's committee, which Strong has characterized as interference.

Fleming, under White House orders to resolve the dispute, was due back late last night from a trip.

Giegengack Quits As Public Printer

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The White House yesterday announced the resignation of Augustus E. Giegengack as Public Printer and the appointment of Deputy John J. Deviny as his successor, effective Monday.

Public Printer for 13½ years, "Gus" Giegengack told President Truman he was quitting his $10,000-a-year post as head of the United States Government Printing Office—largest print shop in the world—in order to increase his earnings.

"I take this action because my duty to my family demands that I increase my income substantially above the salary fixed by Congress for the position under a law passed 20 years ago," the Public Printer wrote the President.

The 57-year-old GPO chief will become associated with a New York graphic arts consulting service at a "better than double" salary.

The new Public Printer, Deviny, is a native Washingtonian, born in the "very shadow" of the Government Printing Office, which is at North Capitol and H sts. As a child, he played in that area.

Deviny was named deputy to Giegengack four years ago, and thereby became the right hand man of his own former right hand man. In 1926 Deviny served as president of the Association of Printing House Craftmans; Giegengack was vice president, and succeeded Deviny as head of the trade organization the following year.

"Gus" Giegengack was Public Printer for a longer period than any of his predecessors and was the second oldest appointee of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt in point of service. (Dean of FDR's appointees is Civil Service Commissioner Harry B. Mitchell.)

In accepting the resignation, President Truman paid tribute to Giegengack "as a loyal, efficient public servant who had the respect and support" of Congress and the entire printing industry.

"The Government Printing Office is a great organization and is doing a real job for the taxpayer," Giegengack told the President in his letter of resignation.

Under Giegengack, the GPO grew from an organization of 5000 to 7501 personnel. Operations of GPO rose from 20 million dollars annually to 65 million dollars. Giegengack directed the construction of a new streamlined plant; introduced a system of cost accounting; set up an art department to make Government publications more appetizing to the eye, and undertook research for industry.

Giegengack was born in New York, with printer's ink in his veins. His mother and her father were both printers. He learned the business from the apprenticeship stage. An enlisted man in World War I, he became mechanical superintendent for the "Stars and Stripes." He later helped organize the American Legion.

For some 25 years, Giegengack was associated with the New York printing industry. He was general manager and treasurer of Whitaker, Giegengack, and Trapp, and during the NRA days, was code director for the trade typesetting industry. He was appointed Public Printer in 1934 by President Roosevelt, who got to calling him "Giggie."

A big, bald, round-faced man, Giegengack lives with his wife, and 22-year-old daughter, at 3016 Tilden st. nw. He has not decided when—or if—he will move to New York.

Deviny, 65, was born off Capitol Hill, at 3d st. and Maryland ave. ne., attended Gonzaga College High School here and Josephinum College in Columbus, Ohio. He earned a law degree from Washington College of law in 1919, serving as president of his class.

The new Public Printer began his career in 1900 as an apprentice with the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and worked his way up to assistant director. He left the Government in 1925, to join the Miller Printing Machinery Co. in Pittsburgh and later the United Typothetae of America.

After 10 years in industry, Deviny returned to Federal service, as one of the "originals" in the Social Security Board, becoming assistant director, Bureau of Old Age Pensions, and then a member of the Appeals Council. He was appointed Deputy Public Printer March 2, 1941.

Deviny lives with his wife at 3571 Brandywine st. nw. They have a daughter and three grandchildren.

House Passes Bill to Train Army Reserve

Post Reporter

Legislation aimed at bolstering the Nation's Army and Air Force Reserves—now largely a "paper" force—into a ready-to-go outfit nearly a million strong, was passed by the House yesterday.

Approved by uanimous voice vote was a Senate bill authorizing the reservists to be paid for weekly or biweekly drills on the same basis as National Guardsmen and Naval Reservists.

Representative Towe (R. N. J.), who sponsored the measure on the floor, said its object was to provide "incentive pay" to the Army and Air Force Reservists "so that the Nation can be reasonably prepared for a sudden war."

Final Passage Assured

As only technical amendments were made by the House, final passage of the Administration-sponsored measure is assured, Towe said.

Three types of Reserves will be set up by the bill. "Class A," ground and air units, with full complements of officers and enlisted men, are provided, and should be ready for mobilization at the same time as the National Guard.

Members will spend one night a week in training and be paid a day's pay for the two-hour or more training period. They'd also take two weeks active duty each summer with pay.

"Class B" units, with full officer complement and a skeletonized enlisted contingent, will train one night every two weeks with pay and go to summer camp once every three years. "Class C" units, composed of officers only, will be trained and paid on the same basis as the "B" organizations.

Objectives Outlined

In addition, some pilots, radar technicians and other specialists also will be allowed inactive duty training pay under standards to be set by the Army and Air Force.

The House Armed Services Committee said that 66,808 Army and Air Force officers and enlisted men now are training two nights a month or more without receiving pay. By 1953, it is hoped that a force of 926,216 officers and men will be enrolled and taking the regular part-time training.

Towe warned the House, however, that this objective probably could not be realized without universal military training. He declared that armories must be provided for the reserve units to make the part-time training effective.

The cost of the program is estimated at 90 million dollars next year, mounting to 150 millions a year eventually.

USAF to Train 50 Greek Fliers

Fifty Greek air cadets are en route to the United States for a year's training at USAF training centers, it was announced yesterday.

The Greek youths will enter the regular March aviation cadet class at Randolph Field, Tex. They will receive the same training as American cadets and be schooled as combat pilots flying P-51 Mustang fighters and B-25 Mitchell bombers.

The training is a part of the Greek military aid program.

J. H. Marshall Resigns Post at Agriculture

The Agriculture Department announced yesterday the resignation of James E. Marshall as director of its sugar branch.

He will be succeeded by Lawrence Myers, associate director of the branch. Marshall plans to enter private industry.

Bill Asks 30 Millions To Convert Sea Water

Representative Fletcher (R., Calif.) offered a bill yesterday to authorize 30 million dollars for construction of pilot plants to produce drinking water from sea water and other materials.

The bill says such plants would conserve and increase the Nation's water resources. (The armed forces produced good drinking water from sea water on a limited scale during the war.)

Andrews Gets New Facility For Landings

The Air Force yesterday established an approach control facility at Andrews Field to relieve air traffic congestion over Washington in bad weather.

Until now, Andrews' GCA radar equipment has been used only for training and for USAF planes heading for that field. Now the Ground Control Approach system there will be available for instrument let-downs to all military aircraft upon request and to all civilian planes in emergencies.

Officials said the action should cut down materially the time all planes will have to fly figure eights in the "stack" in bad weather, waiting to land at National Airport. USAF pilots can still use National for instrument landings, under the new plan.

Any A-Supplies Strike Vital, Says Lilienthal

Chairman David E. Lilienthal of the Atomic Energy Commission warned yesterday that work stoppages at any of the privately-operated plants furnishing supplies to the commission might be even more serious than a strike at the Government's own atomic plants.

He told the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee that a "rather wide segment of American industry" is engaged in producing vital supplies for the atomic program.

The committee began hearings on a "shutdown-proof" labor policy for the atomic program. Chairman Bourke B. Hickenlooper opened the session by remarking that "a work stoppage in this vital field is unthinkable."

Air Parcel Post To Start Next Monday

International air parcel post will be inaugurated next Monday with mass mailing of "friendship packages" to needy peoples, the post-office and airlines announced yesterday.

Packages will be mailed at post-offices throughout the country on March 15 and will be placed aboard United States international airlines in New York the next day for delivery to 23 countries.

The ceremonies will be highlighted by a program at the Washington National Airport at which Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson and heads of foreign missions here will hail the world's first air parcel post system.

Dairy Indictments

Offhand it appears a little strange that the Department of Justice should have moved at this time to obtain indictment of seven dairies distributing milk locally for practices which they have followed in essence over a number of years. The explanation, in our opinion, is twofold. First, price-fixing and milk-classification policies set while milk distributors were operating under the Federal Milk Marketing Order are not necessarily legal now that distributors have abandoned such cooperation. Secondly, unquestionably present prices for milk and milk products, however arrived at, have resulted in decreased consumption, especially in low-income families. If there is an artificial and illegal peg on milk prices, then clearly the Justice Department had an extra mandate, because of the inflationary situation, to act at this time.

Fundamentally the question revolves around whether there is proper protection for the consumer in the three arbitrary classifications of milk products which the dairies have established in their contract with the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, a powerful body which supplies 80 per cent of the milk in the Washington area. Group 1 is fluid milk; group 2 is cream, cottage cheese, etc., and group 3 is ice cream and manufactured by-products. Distributors have contracted to take the entire output of farmers belonging to the milk producers' cooperative, paying according to classification, and in turn they have pledged themselves to buy from no other sources. The theory is that this results in a stabilized price to the farmer, even though during the summer milk surplus season a higher proportion of milk received is diverted into groups 2 and 3 at lower prices to the farmer.

The Government has specifically recognized the legality of price-fixing agreements by farmers' cooperatives much as it recognizes the right of union members to band together and demand certain wages. Moreover, under the Department of Agriculture milk marketing arrangements, distributors were encouraged to enter into a scheme of controlled price-fixing. There is this important difference, however, between what has been done under Federal marketing agreements and what the dairies under indictment have done subsequent to their withdrawal last April; under the marketing agreement, Washington milk prices were tied to wholesale butter prices in New York and rose or fell accordingly; now they are determined entirely by volition of the distributors acting in concert, and neither the consumer nor the Government has any say.

The seriousness of the grand jury indictment is emphasized by the fact that the dairies concerned distribute 86 per cent of the milk sold locally. Thus they have a virtual stranglehold on the market. Furthermore, the indictment alleges a positive effort on the part of these dairies to suppress price competition and bottle up milk supplies that might go to noncooperating dairies—with the intention of forcing them out of business. The validity of the indictments and the degree of guilt, if any, is, of course, a matter for court determination. Whether or not any "conspiracy" is proved to exist, however, it is a healthy thing to have the entire area of agricultural price-fixing, both with and without governmental stimulus, brought under close scrutiny with a view to providing the consumer with more protection than he now has against unwarranted inroads on his pocketbook.

Good Husband–Or Wife

Cynics who believe that successful marriages rest on material foundations instead of spiritual affinities will, no doubt, find a certain amount of support for their views in the results of a Gallup poll, listing the qualities that the participants consider most important in a good husband or wife. For in case of married men top rating is given to wives who are good homemakers and housekeepers, while first on the list of qualities married women consider important in husbands is ability to provide a good living for the family. Such sterling qualities as loyalty, pleasant disposition, and kindliness, which make men and women ideal friends and valued business associates and should be the best guarantees of happy marriages, are rated far below the ability to maintain or to run a household successfully. Even single men who, as a group, attach less importance to such material qualifications for the married state give priority to the good housekeeper over the agreeable, good companion, while single women who, as a group, appear to be somewhat more romantically inclined than their married sisters, put faithfulness and steadiness on a par with ability to provide.

We do not believe that the emphasis put on the material advantages derivable from marriages to good homemakers or good providers, as the case may be, should be interpreted as evidence of a trend toward marriages of mutual convenience based on a cold weighing of the qualifications of a prospective life partner. On the contrary, we strongly suspect that some of the married men and women who expressed a preference for well-run homes and economic security have belatedly realized that the partners of their choice lack certain practical qualifications essential to happy home life. In other cases, where the material basis for successful living has been firmly established, husbands and wives have tardily come to realize its importance. It by no means follows that they underrate those qualities of heart and mind that make shared hardships easier to bear.

Back To Salem

The way that morale on the operating level of the State Department is being undermined by the loose charges flung at it in Congress is nothing short of a national scandal. The committee that is the latest to come within the range of culpability is the House Appropriations Committee. Looking into the department's operations for budget purposes, the committee's investigators "incidentally" disclosed a list of "108 former, present and prospective employes concerning most of whom there was some doubt as to loyalty." The "disclosure" gave rise to another of those debates in the House which one of these days may encourage Moscow to think and act upon the thought that the American Administration is riddled with communism. The danger is increased because of the Muscovite habit of believing what they want to believe. Moreover, the smearers are giving the impression to the American people that the diplomatic arm of their Government is corroded with disloyalty and so encouraging disunity and defeatism at home.

The committee is currently recommending a cut in the department's budget on grounds that the department is clogged with red tape and duplication. Maybe the charge is justified, though we share the feeling expressed by Representatives Bolton and Herter, among others, that in the present crisis in our world affairs the ax wielders should exercise care. Doubtless, as this newspaper has had several occasions to remark, there is need for streamlining in the State Department, for the department, never a shining example of efficiency, has "growed" like Topsy. Presumably something schematic will be forthcoming out of the Hoover Committee which is studying reform of the executive establishment. But, if the department is ill run, that is no excuse for the character assassination that is constantly being indulged in at the operating officials' expense. The exhibition last week was particularly deplorable.

The department, of course, had its defenders in the House. Representative Boykin made mincemeat of the implications back of the "108" indictment. It appears that only 64 were on the department's rolls on February 4, 1948. The other 44 had resigned, been let out, or were merely applicants for employment and had never been on the department's payrolls. Moreover, of the 64 the department had given security approval to 29 after a very thorough and exhaustive examination. The cases of 19 more had been referred to the FBI for a loyalty investigation. Of the 16 left, 3 are before the Personnel Security Board for decision and in the remaining 13 cases the security considerations are insufficient to warrant reference to the FBI for a loyalty investigation. Yet, in spite of this refutation, the House the next day was compelled to listen to another spell of smearing at the department's expense. There were no real Americans in the department; the department is incompetent and so completely infiltrated with Communists that it would be dangerous to let it administer anything; it is administering a foreign American policy. Representative Cannon, who a few days before had been defending Representative Taber against a criticism in this newspaper, took up the cudgels against a Taber expression of wonderment whether "the United States has any real representation at all in the Department of State." And so on, ad nauseam.

Speaker Martin some time ago said that Congress was the victim of sundry people who were undermining its standing. Nobody—even those that legislators tar with guilt by the slightest association—has yet ventured to suggest that the House is a bunch of Communists because it harbors a Communist member, Representative Marcantonio. Of that this particular committee is doing the work of Satan precisely because it rubs elbows every day with that member. God help a State Department employe, however, if he were found in the same bus as Vito Marcantonio! If this blackening goes on, there will be a spate of resignations, and the department will not be able to find any recruits. This at a time when the best brains in the country are needed in the department.

Two Candidates

The hats of President Truman and General MacArthur, latest candidates for the Democratic and Republican tickets, respectively, cover two diametrically opposed persons. Mr. Truman is a man that you could meet in any gathering of average Americans. General MacArthur is one of the most eminent figures in our military history, a natural proconsul who, as was said of a French monarch, knows the trade of being a king. He has not been in the country since 1936. Mr. Truman has stayed at home, moving slowly and surely up the political ladder till he fell heir to the Presidency on Mr. Roosevelt's death. MacArthur is as aloof, almost forbiddingly so, as Truman is companionable.

It is axiomatic, particularly in peacetime, that a man has to be a competent politician in order to make a competent President. In this respect Mr. Truman had learned the political ropes when he became President and since then has had his daily lesson. Beyond that, however, Mr. Truman was singularly ill-fitted for the Atlas-like role in world affairs to which he was fortuitously hoisted. That was not his fault. It was Mr. Roosevelt's. It is said that from the time Mr. Truman was elected to the Vice Presidency to the time of Mr. Roosevelt's death—a space of three months—the two never met. Thus Mr. Truman was never made acquainted with what had been going on either in war strategy or in peace preparation. Nor could he have caught up for many months, for, as was shown over the Yalta agreements, not even supposed insiders had been made privy to all the Roosevelt-Stalin arrangements. Pity Mr. Truman in those early days! Nevertheless, as a President he has improved upon the prophecies, though as a Democratic President he has lacked the personality that is necessary to keep together a party which to all intents and purposes is an alliance.

The Republicans, of course, are more cohesive than the Democrats, or, perhaps, less incohesive; for there are pretty deep fissures in the GOP. However, they have not the same feeling of dependence upon a strong leader. Certainly the professionals would look askance at such a dominating personality as General MacArthur's. And, of course, the feeling against a man who so obviously has a military bent of mind is deep enough to be a factor against MacArthur's chances. When General Eisenhower said that "lifelong professional soldiers, in the absence of some obvious and overriding reasons, [should] abstain from seeking high political office," he heard an echo from the generality of Americans. Still the times are so much out of joint that some people clung to the qualifying clause in the Eisenhower statement.

Nominations this year, and certainly the election, are, it seems to us, going to be dependent in great measure on the status of the fast-moving situation in our foreign affairs. The country is in a zone of war with Soviet Russia. Of that there can be no question. And the people's choice will be determined in part on their evaluation of candidates from the standpoint of leadership in war as well as in the kind of quasi-war that is now being waged.

Intellectual Imperialism

Mr. William T. Couch, director of the University of Chicago Press, has disconcerted his brethren of the book publishing trade by a series of highly embarrassing questions about what he considers a scheme for exploiting the Marshall Plan in the interest of an export market for American books. In an angry manifesto, called It Costs Us Nothing, Mr. Couch quotes from a resolution adopted by the directors of the American Textbook Publishers Institute. This resolution, it appears, urged—> the Government of the United States to specify, when loans are made to other countries, that a certain fraction of dollar exchange be allocated to the acquirement of scientific, technical and educational books of United States origin, and to provide, when drawing up trade treaties, that reasonable quantities of such books and periodicals shall be supplied as well as capital and other goods.

Mr. Couch also quotes an official of the American Book Publishers Council as indicating that this ingenious scheme for extending American culture and learning through power politics originated with the Department of State. This official, it appears, stated that—> in the past few months State Department officials have several times approached us, rather than we them, saying that if they could be assured of the interest of American publishers in developing the foreign market for their books, the department was prepared to make an all-out effort in support of its profound belief in such a program.

What appears to have outraged Mr. Couch is the unseemly alacrity and gratitude with which both the Textbook Publishers Institute and the Book Publishers Council have accepted and are supporting this scheme. This, says Mr. Couch, is pure cartelism. Here are "groups of private entrepreneurs cooperating in seeking world markets . . . using Government support . . . seeking to force their products on other countries. In what way do these American book publishers' cartels differ from Nazi cartels?" If the Europeans, demands Mr. Couch, "really want American books," and we lend them the money to buy, can't they be trusted to make their own allocations . . . without benefit of U. S. State Department advice or pressure?"

In discussing the argument that the influence of American books is needed abroad to counteract the effects of communism and to inculcate the American ideals of freedom and democracy, Mr. Couch is equally caustic. What if "the rest of the world doesn't want to learn all that Americans want to teach? How long will it be before we will adopt as a regular procedure the counsel of the fanatic, the splitting of heads to put sense in them?" It seems to us that, if the facts are as Mr. Couch states them, his points are well taken indeed. The plan, as Mr. Couch describes it, is a new and dangerous wrinkle in imperialism.

"Turning On The Light"

I have been reading with much interest your series of editorials in regard to congressional inquiries. In your editorial (No. X) of March 4, 1948, in discussing the use by Congress of its contempt power your state that "a proper start could be made by amending the existing law so as to provide that no witness before an investigating committee should be cited for contempt for refusal to answer questions as to his religious or political beliefs."

I do not think that any such amendment is necessary, because the Supreme Court of the United States has held as follows:

"If there is any fixed star in our constitutional constellation, it is that no official, high or petty, can prescribe what shall be orthodox in politics, nationalism, religion, or other matters of opinion or force citizens to confess by word or act their faith therein." (Emphasis mine.)

Wallace's Darling

When Russia through her fifth column, the Communist Party, seized effective control of Czechoslovakia and demanded that cowed and unwilling Finland give her military bases, Mr. Wallace, the candidate backed by the Communists, of course, blamed President Truman and the American Goverment, not Russia and her Communists. Listening to Mr. Wallace one would believe that Russia is never wrong and the United States always is. He says we are getting two tough with Russia.

Actually we have offered to share with her control of the atomic bomb, which is now our exclusive possession, by setting up an international atomic energy commission with Russia in it. This is hardly getting tough. It is true that we have opposed aggression by Russia and her Communist-dominated satellites. But this is getting tough against aggression, not necessarily against Russia. Evidently Mr. Wallace thinks that aggression is the path to peace when practiced by his darling Russia or her allies!

If this seems dumb to the average man we must remember that Mr. Wallace testified in Washington that he did not know what the Communist policy was. Even if we believe this statement was not untrue, it certainly proves that he is far too ignorant to be worthy of our votes. Any man who claims to be liberal and wants to be President has a duty to know what the Communist line is.

Licenses By Mail

No doubt many persons who have obtained their new 1948 D. C. auto tags within but a few moments at the Municipal Center will wonder just what Mr. Thomas B. Mechling is driving at when in his letter of March 5 he complains of citizens waiting in line for two and three hours for their auto licenses.

No one with an application for tags has had to wait two or three hours at any time this year. Nor even a half-hour, for that matter. The lines in Room 1000, where new tags are issued, move rapidly toward the windows in but very few minutes (except during the customary last-minute rush) and at the tag windows, no more than a few seconds is required to complete the transaction.

It is more likely that Mr. Mechling has reference to the delay at windows where application is made for a D. C. certificate of title. Here, of course, the situation is, of necessity, more involved, and employes of four departments, Vehicles and Traffic, the Recorder of Deeds, the Assessor and the Collector of Taxes, are required to carry out provisions of certain acts of Congress which spell out in detail the administrative procedures which have been designed to protect the public against misrepresentation and fraud in automobile ownership transactions.

The procedure for obtaining a certificate of title and tags is as follows:

1. Take car to one of the testing stations for inspection. Take with you the existing title, or, if none, a notarized bill of sale or certificate of ownership. The test station will issue a certificate of inspection and applications for a D. C. certificate of title and tags.

2. After completing the title application, and having it notarized, attach the certificate of inspection, tag application, the existing title, notarized bill of sale or certificate of ownership, together with remittance of $1 made payable to the Collector of Taxes, D. C., for certificate of title, and another remittance, payable to the Recorder of Deeds, D. C., in the amount of 50 cents each for the recording of any existing liens on the vehicle. Mail all papers to the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, 301 C st. nw., Washington 1, D. C.

3. Tag application will be returned to you accompanied by certificate of title if you are the sole owner of car. If a lien is shown, the title will be mailed to the lien holder.

4. Mail the tag application and remittance payable to the Collector of Taxes, D. C., to the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, and tags will be mailed.

Under this procedure, no visit to or wait at the department, is required. HERMAN S. COLE, Administrative Officer, Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

"More On Yalta"

Obviously The Washington Post does not like the Yalta agreement. Neither do I. But in my dislike for the agreement I would not presume to lash out, as you did in your editorial of February 21, with the plain implication (despite the use of the ambiguous word "egregious") that if our military leaders hadn't been so dumb they would have known there was no need for Russian help in fighting Japan; hence, no need for the Yalta agreement.

Of course, Japan knew well before Germany collapsed that she could not win the war. But who can say how many months—and at the cost of how many American lives—she would have hung on before throwing in the sponge?

Do you really mean that the atomic bomb and the entry of Russia in the war had nothing at all to do with the shortening of the 17-month holdout estimate made by Marshall to the actual four months?

Youd'd do well to dig up a better whipping boy than Marshall if you feel you must have one.

Shorthand Errors

Let me join the scores of Gregg writers who will undoubtedly write you about the shorthand characters which headed the story of Dr. Gregg's death in your issue of February 26.

Of the 25 shorthand characters, 14 were written correctly, and 11—John, Robert, speed, writing, system, millions, workers, tool, their buried, afternoon—were written incorrectly.

Dr. Gregg spent about 50 years spreading his system of shorthand over the world, and he always insisted that it be written correctly—according to the principles of the system. When Dr. Gregg gets through whirling about madly in his grave over such sacrilege, he will probably spend the rest of his spiritual existence haunting The Washington Post.

Palestine Policy

I must agree with a recent critic in your columns that much of the exposition of the American stand on Palestine before the Security Council was legalistic hocus-pocus. What Senator Austin should have plainly said was that the United Nations plan to partition Palestine has proved unworkable. The basic premise underlying this partition plan was that the two sovereign states, Jewish and Arab, were to be created by peaceful means and were to coexist, side by side, bound together in economic unity by a customs union. Such an attainment is apparently impossible.

Consequently, partition is of no help to the displaced persons who wish to emigrate, while it has placed in jeopardy the lives of those Jews who have been fortunate enough to find a home and a refuge in the Holy Land.

Too often Zionist arguments are garbed in humanitarian vestments. It ill behooves Zionist sympathizers to shed crocodile tears over the displaced persons. If one half the money and effort that has been expended in behalf of stateism had been exerted in behalf of the Stratton bill, many of the displaced persons would be on their way to homes in the United States instead of being held in Europe as hostages for a Jewish state.

The pattern of Zionist strategy is evident. The United Nations was first told, "Decree our state and we will do the rest." Next came the plea for arms alone. Then the plea was made to send a United Nations international police force. If these measures should prove impossible or ineffective, we shall finally see a concerted effort to pursuade the United States to intervene unilaterally with armed support for the proposed state.

What I as an American of Jewish faith decry above all else is the manner in which political Zionists blithely and purposely cast aside all consideration of what action may be in the best interests of the United States as "militaristic, British and Wall Street imperialism." To them, above all else and at any cost, Jewish nationalism as embodied in statehood must be supported.

At this moment the United States and our western allies are entering into a new and final phase of the "cold" war against the Soviet Union and the forces of communism. The economic reconstruction of Europe and the achievement of the closest possible unity (both economic and political) with the other democracies has become the No. 1 goal of our foreign policy. For this task our undivided strength and attention will be required.

Setting aside the controversy as to whether the United States last November should have forced partition down the throat of U. N., our Government must now, more than three months later in a world in which a free Czechoslovakia no longer exists, reexamine the problem and decide a position on the present merits in the light of what will be best for the United States. The course that is found to be in the best interests of this country will necessarily be in the best interests of American Jewry and of Jawry throughout the world.

Youth's Part In Politics

By Malvina Lindsay

Campus Portents

YOUTH IS pushing more aggressively into the political scene. Students in Czechoslovakia are being punished for making the only public protest against Soviet expansion. Students whoop it up at Henry Wallace rallies. Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Rally of French Youth launches its anti-Communist crusade. Eastern Europe's Communist youth evangelizes zealously against the Marshall Plan. In China, Norway, and elsewhere students stage demonstrations that hold seed of future history.

What does this augur for the world? Further tightening of Right and Left lines in Europe? A coming reversal in this country of the conservative political tide?

Henry Wallace of course doesn't have all of youth's allegiance. Americans for Democratic Action, the anti-Communist left wingers, have a strong youth following. The old parties have their Young Democrats and Young Republicans—including many balding and graying members. A great many young people in college and out are working in world government movements or as Student Federalists.

But the response of college youth to the Wallace movement is enough to make politicians who see beyond their noses—in this case beyond 1948—do some thinking. Rock-ribbed statesmen of course aren't worrying. Youth's always that way, they remark from Olympus—in fact they themselves were a "little radical" when they were younger. The boys and girls will get their senses back in time, and anyway what good are they as campaign contributors?

SOME WHO give the matter more serious thought see youth characteristically reaching for pat answers to political problems, for rosy formulas that will settle its gropings, point the straight path to the good life. Also youth here as well as abroad is hungry for even a crumb of political idealism. It sees materialism, cynicism, opportunism, everywhere in politics and government. It wants something new to stir its soul.

Hitler was smart enough to make his youth movement a fanatical religion. Communist youth finds in its ideology a religious faith. De Gaulle's youth brings religious fervor to its crusade against communism. The Wallace movement to its young adherents is likewise a "Gideon's" charge.

Youth over much of the world is on the march politically, and many forces are bidding for its support. That will of course be divided. Some youth as always will automatically follow family and tradition in politics. But young people generally are showing a strong tendency to think for themselves. In war-ridden countries they have been matured beyond their years. Many young Americans who went to war have lived several lives already. About two million veterans are having their mental processes sharpened at college. The younger college set is becoming aware that it must venture into a dangerous world, not the ostriches' paradise in which its parents danced through the 1920's.

HARRIS WOFFORD, Jr., young founder of Student Federalists, Inc., after observing 20,000 young people in a Communist-dominated conference at Prague last summer, concluded that what youth wanted was a world political faith. Many European youths, he pointed out, believed they had found that faith in communism. What was urgently needed now he felt was a dynamic alternative democratic faith, one presented in a way to arouse enthusiasm and inspire confidence in the future, but one free of mental regimentation and mob emotion.

It is harder in a democratic system to rally youth in any mass political expression because programs and goals cannot be laid out in black and white. Government must be carried on the hard way by the people's slow, clumsy—but free—experimentation.

Yet youth generally in this country, as well as in Europe, is likely to be moved only by a program that carries some idealism, some promise of a better society, and that extends its ideals beyond a narrow nationalism. The party or leader who gets its support will have to do something more than point with pride or view with alarm.

Noninterference

We hold it immoral to interfere in the internal affairs of other nations. We may supply Greece with guns and dollars because she is attacked by guerillas who receive support from the outside—but we may not attach conditions to our aid. In the case of Czechoslovakia we can only protest (after the fact), because power was seized by native Communists through more or less legal use of existing institutions. The failure to remove tyranny in the one case, and to prevent it in the other spring alike from our exaltation of noninterference. And now the same insane delusion prompts up to propose a defense union. We will save Italy from Tito and deliver her to Togliatti.

If we are to cling to this fiction of noninterference, let us at least allow ourselves what we allow our enemy. If Russia can subsidize pro-Russian parties abroad, we can subsidize pro-American parties. We, too, can publish newspapers, stage rallies, participate in unions, and enter parties in elections. We need not, indeed must not, align ourselves with the reactionary elements. We do not wish to drive liberals into communism, but rather to offer a palatable alternative to the tyrannies of both left and right. It is only by operating within countries instead of merely lealing with them that we can determine how our power shall be used.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

In The Russian Skies

THE MILITARY phase of the Soviet-western conflict has clearly begun, marked by the proposed defensive alliance between the western European powers and the United States. The real military balance of power between the Soviet Union and the United States thus becomes more important than ever. And it is time to recognize the fact that, especially in the crucial race for supremacy in the air, the Soviet Union is pulling well ahead.

Information on Soviet armaments can never, of course, be wholly accurate. Yet the most reliable information available indicates that the existing Soviet military air strength of 14,000 combat planes more than equals that of the rest of the world combined. What is more important, there is evidence that the Soviets are achieving an immense production lead. During the last year, the Soviet Union is believed to have produced just short of 7000 military planes, equal to slightly more than 70 per cent of world combat plane production. The United States was a poor second with 14 per cent of world production, and the rest of the world tailed.

Statistics are dull but these statistics are worth pondering. Nor do they tell the whole story. The war-developed jet-propelled fighter plane has made all other types of fighter obsolete. According to those who should know, the Soviet factories last year turned out upward of 1700 jet fighters, in five different designs. During the same period, the United States produced less than one-fifth that number of jets. This year, the Soviets are stepping up jet production to more than 2500 planes.

EVEN MORE disturbing to those responsible for American security has been very recent evidence that the Russians are now attempting to produce what had previously been an Anglo-American monopoly—a long-range strategic air force. During the war the Soviet air force was strictly tactical. But, in the last few weeks, mass formations of heavy long-range bombers, patterned on the American B-29, have appeared in the Russian skies. Soviet technicians have also produced a modification of the B-29, with a longer fuselage for troop transport.

It is estimated that with existing aircraft, plus gliders, the Soviets could now transport in the neighborhood of 65,000 troops to any point in an area which includes most of Europe, the Middle East and North Africa. With the B-29 type bomber, moreover, Soviet aviators, flying one way from existing Soviet bases, could reach any point in the United States except for the tip of Florida and small portions of Texas.

These facts, of which most Americans are blissfully unware, are certainly alarming. To be sure, they are no doubt less alarming than they appear at first glance. For the great Soviet air superiority is in part at least illusory. Many planes in the vast Soviet air force are of a type long ago declared obsolete by the United States Air Force. Moreover, although the Soviets have capable technicians, American technical capacity is still far superior.

Of the five Soviet jet designs, for example, only one is believed to rival American designs in speed and range. And that one is a close imitation of the American P-84 (Republic Thunderjet). Moreover, there is evidence that the Soviets are not entirely successful. The new Soviet long-range bomber is undoubtedly an exact copy of three American B-29's which were forced down in Siberia toward the end of the war, and which the Russians refused to return. Yet the Soviet technicians evidently had trouble trying to copy the extremely hard-to-make wheel assemblies, for some months ago the Soviets attempted unsuccessfully to buy several hundred B-29 wheel assemblies from an American company.

FINALLY, it is quite clear that in the long run the American industrial potential is immensely greater than that of the Soviet Union. Yet certainly there are no grounds for complacency. The western powers cannot hope to rival the Soviet ground forces. The Russians put more than 600 divisions in the field during the war, the United States less than 100. Anglo-American sea power is supreme, but sea power is incompletely effectively against a massive continental land power. Moreover, in their more candid movements, Navy men will admit that no effective defense has been found for the new Soviet-German submarine capable of submerging indefinitely and of speeding under water at 17 knots. And the Soviet Union holds Europe hostage against the atomic bomb, during the dwindling period of the American atomic monopoly.

The implications are clear. A western European military alliance to forestall further Soviet expansion is coming into being. Without American military strength to support it, this military alliance will be meaningless. Effective American military strength requires decisive superiority in the air. Air superiority will not be achieved cheaply. But the possible cost of allowing the Soviets indefinitely to increase their lead in the air is not pleasant to contemplate.

Washington Calling

Republican Sniping At ERP

IT IS TIME for the American people to take a long, hard look at the actions of the Republican majorities in the Senate and the House. If it is on the basis of their present performance that the Republicans are asking to be installed in the White House, then that performance should be held up to the light.

Childs

In the Senate the Republican leader on foreign policy, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, has worked manfully to get the European Recovery Program adopted by March 15. That deadline is set against the mounting political crisis in Europe and, above all, against the date of the Italian election—April 18. That election may well be, as Vandenberg has said in urgent private discussions, the most important election of the past 50 years and the next 100 years.

Meeting the ERP deadline is supposedly official Republican policy, backed by Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio. But what is happening? The Republican whip, Senator Kenneth Wherry of Nebraska, has organized a rump revolt in his own party.

While he says blandly for the record that there must be no delay, he is keeping careful tabulation of those Senators who want to debate hour after hour. He is putting them forward to utter such fantastic moonshine as sane people would hardly believe at this moment in history. So it seems likely that the debate will run through this week and into next week while the sand in the hour-glass runs out.

ON FEBRUARY 17, Senator William E. Jenner of Indiana delivered the keynote speech at Nebraska's Republican convention in Omaha. He attacked the Marshall Plan in terms so demagogic and so savage that it caused a bad reaction, even though Jenner apparently thought he was talking in territory where he could go as far as he liked.

"Where was the Marshall Plan first proposed?" He is reported to have said, in a speech which was not taken down and with no manuscript to speak from. "It was at Haa-vv-ahd. This is a Haa-vv-ahd Plan."

Senator James P. Kem of Missouri speaks with the same blind disregard of fact. These men organized themselves into a private cabal to defeat the recovery program by sniping and sabotage. They are proceeding by sabotage because they know a frontal attack could not succeed. Repeatedly, in public-opinion polls and in every other way, large majorities in this country have shown that they want to build peace and stability by peaceful means before it is too late.

In the House an enfeebled and confused leadership—if it can be called that—proposes to link with the recovery program a half dozen other issues. These issues are loaded with controversy. They stem in part from furious partisans who have their own individual foreign policies to save their pet foreign countries.

One of these issues, linking military air with economic aid, would have to be considered by the Senate if the House should attach it to the recovery bill. That would mean weeks and weeks of new debate.

Now the House leadership is considering an Easter holiday. Congress would go away a day or two before Easter, which is March 28, and would not return until April 5 or 6. The House would not act on the recovery program until after returning from this holiday.

WHEN SECRETARY of State George C. Marshall heard of this, he went up to Capitol Hill with Undersecretary Robert Lovett to plead with Speaker Joseph Martin the terrible urgency of action. If the holiday schedule is adhered to and if the House persists in making the recovery bill into a six-ring circus, the program can hardly be adopted before June.

Republicans of the Wherry-Jenner type are obviously counting on Democratic bankruptcy in November. They are counting on sliding into the White House by default.

But they should begin to understand that there is a growing suspicion of something like bankruptcy in the Republican Party. That is the meaning of the persistent belief, evidenced in wide sections of the population, that in spite of his firm no, General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower may still be drafted to serve his country in the White House.

This is an astonishing political phenomenon that the old leaders of the old parties cannot ignore. Why, even Henry Wallace (Henry has, of course, said everything on every side of every subject) stated publicly that Eisenhower would sweep the country and, in office, would be more likely than any other available candidate to prevent a military dictatorship.

Deep down in the commonsense of the American people is an understanding that this is not the time for cynical politicians to slide into power by default. That is behind the wishful hope of millions of Americans that in some way a man of greatness—and they put Eisenhower in the hero's shrine—can lead the country out of danger and division.

Middle Eastern Oil Discounted As Defense Aid

The United State should develop its own oil resources and not count on Middle Eastern oil in the event of another war, a Foreign Policy Association report said yesterday.

Eastern oil to the

The report, prepared by Bernard Brodie, professor of international relations at Yale University, said the strategic value of Middle Eastern oil to the United States has been decidedly overstressed."

This was an apparent reference to recent statements by the top defense and State Department officials that Middle Eastern oil is vital this Nation's security.

"For the United States, the Middle East is one of the most insecure areas of the globe," Brodie said. "Whether it is possible to defend that area against the Soviet Union is not at issue. But whether the oil itself or its denial to an opponent, would be worth the price to defend it is quite another matter."

He said the answer "must certainly be no" if there is any "feasible alternative."

Brodie, who is a senior national defense consultant to the Library of Congress legislative reference service, proposed that instead of banking on foreign oil the Government adopt a "national strategic oil policy" aimed at deeveloping enough petroleum reserves close at hand for any contingency.

To this end he urged the use of Government subsidies to encourage continued exploration for crude oil in the United States and to help develop a synthetic oil industry. Congress recently voted to extend a program of Government experimentation in synthetic oil.

Wheeler Opposes Congress Action On Tidelands Oil

By The Associated Press

Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, former Senator, opposed yesterday any attempt by Congress to decide whether the Federal Government or the States own the oil-rich tidelands.

The big oil companies stand to gain, he said, no matter whether Congress passes a bill giving the States ownership, or an Administration bill providing for Federal leasing of the land.

Wheeler testified at the start of the 14th day of a hearing before a Senate-House judiciary subcommittee on a bill backed by most States to surrender Federal ownership of all submerged lands within State boundaries.

"The Government bill is just as favorable to the oil companies as this bill," Wheeler said. "The Government bill is entirely in favor of the big oil companies as against the little fellows who go out prospecting for oil."

Wheeler, now a Washington attorney, has filed a suit in Federal District Court here in behalf of several applicants for Federal leases. He contends in the suit that the Mineral Leasing Act of 1920 is applicable to the tidelands.

The Gallup Poll

French Public Apprehensive Over Danger of Communism

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 9.—Even before the Communist coup in Czechoslovakia, French public opinion was uneasy and apprehensive over the danger of Communists in France.

A poll by the French Institute of Public Opinion, one of the 12 affiliates in the Gallup Poll international organization, sounded French opinion as to the relative danger to France of the Communists, the De Gaullists and the new "Third Force." The Third Force (Troisieme Force) is an informal coalition of Socialists, members of the MRP Party and other moderates formed in January to combat both the Communists on the left and the De Gaullists on the right.

The vote in the poll, which was taken in February just before the Czech crisis, follows:

"In your opinion which is the greatest political danger to France at the present time—the Communists, Gaullists or the third force?"

De Gaulle	19
Both	2
Third Force	3
No opinion	20

In the wake of Czechoslovakia some American political observers have put both France and Italy down as possible next victims of Communist expansion.

In France one of the chief obstacles to the spread of communism is the women. Of all the political parties in France, the Communists have by far the fewest proportion of women in their ranks.

The other major parties have approximately 50 per cent women, 50 per cent men. But fewer than one-third of the Communists in France are women. Women are apparently the bulwark of French conservatism, judging by those facts.

The political makeup of the French parties by sex is shown in recent surveys by the French Institute. In the MRP party 52 per cent of the members are women, 48 per cent men. In the Gaullist party the division is 50-50 as between men and women. The Socialists ranks comprise 58 per cent of men and 42 per cent women. The total electorate shows a preponderance of women—55 per cent women, 45 per cent men.

But in the Communist Party the ratio is heavily in favor of men. Sixty-eight per cent of the Communists are men, only 32 per cent women. Women clearly seem less attracted than men by the doctrines and techniques of Moscow.

Would Russia start a war to get something she wanted, or would she fight only in self-defense? That question was put to the voters of France in early February—and seven other nations in one of the Gallup Poll's regular monthly international surveys.

The French result was:

Russia would fight war of aggression	51%
Would fight in defense only	22
No opinion	27

In other countries in this international poll—Italy, Holland, Canada, the United States, Sweden, Norway and Brazil—also showed a high vote to the effect that Russia would start an aggressive war.

By contrast, the same countries were overwhelmingly of the opinion that the United States would not fight a war to get something she wanted but would take up arms only in defense.

Mrs. Billy Sunday Objects to Ballet Named for Spouse

Palatka, Fla., March 9 (AP).—Mrs. Billy Sunday, widow of the famed evangelist, today raised strong objection to the "Billy Sunday Ballet," being presented by the Ballet Husse de Monte Carlo in New York City.

She asked Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York and other officials to "blacklist" the number. Several New York ministers have protested the theme of the ballet, which they described as ribald.

Mrs. Sunday is visiting here at the ranch owned by Homer Rodeheaver, evangelist musical director and Sunday's chief aid before his death.

Health Plan Of Truman Hit By Brookings

President Truman's national health insurance plan was hit and Senator Robert A. Taft's medical care program praised yesterday in a report to Congress by the Brookings Institution.

In a study prepared at the request of a congressional committee, the nationally-known research agency said the President's compulsory health insurance idea might discourage initiative in medicine and tie politics in with medical care.

Urging Congress not to approve health insurance at present, the report said it would be "wise to leave to the individual States" the question whether to adopt health insurance or leave medicine to free enterprise.

Hearings Held on Both

The study was made at the request of Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.), chairman of the Senate Labor Subcommittee on health. The group has held hearings on both the President's plan and Taft's bill, which calls for Federal grants to the States to help care for the health of the needy.

Smith, who has been critical of insurance plans, said he considers the Brookings report in line with the philosophy of the Taft bill.

The Brookings study said the Federal Government and the States might well undertake programs of health research and education, preventive medicine, hospital expansion and care for the needy.

Too Much Control

But it said compulsory health insurance would "necessitate a high degree of governmental regulation and control over the personnel and the agencies engaged in providing medical care."

"This field of regulation and control would be far more difficult than any other large field previously entered by the Government," it said. "And past experience with governmental regulations and control in the United States causes doubt whether it encourages initiative and development."

The study also said it was unlikely that politics could be kept out of a governmental system of medical care.

Navy Transfers 2 Admirals Here

Washington is getting a new superintendent of the Naval Gun Factory here and a new Navy public relation chief.

Rear Admiral Frank G. Fahrion was named superintendent of the Naval Gun Factory yesterday replacing Rear Admiral Theodore Davis Ruddock, jr., who will leave for West Coast duty.

Rear Admiral Felix L. Johnson, public relations director, was assigned to command Atlantic Fleet destroyers, with headquarters in Norfolk, Va. He will be replaced here by Rear Admiral Edward C. Ewen, who was chief of Naval Air Reserve training at Glenview, Ill.

The shifts were revealed in routine processing of officers' orders here yesterday.

The orders disclosed that Rear Admiral Emmett P. Forrestel, commander of the Norfolk Naval Base, has been named commander of United States Pacific Fleet destroyers, with headquarters at Pearl Harbor.

He will relieve Rear Admiral Fahrion, who will take charge of the Naval Gun Factory. Fahrion, 53, of Raleigh, N. C., commanded the Newport, R. I., torpedo station during the war. He later helped direct preparations for the 1946 atom bomb tests and subsequent salvage operations.

Admiral Charles M. Cooke, jr., former commander of naval forces in the Far East, was ordered to report for duty in the office of the Chief of Naval Operations here. He had been on temporary duty at the Twelfth Naval District Headquarters in San Francisco.

Forrestel, 49, of Buffalo, N. Y., served as wartime aide to the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and as operations officer with the Fifth Fleet under Admiral William F. (Bull) Halsey. He has commanded the Norfolk base since June, 1946.

Johnson, 50, of Aberdeen, N. C., and Leonardtown, Md., has been director of Navy public relations since November, 1946. He was Assistant Chief of Staff to the South Pacific Naval Commander during the war and commanded the cruiser Springfield when it escorted President Roosevelt to Yalta.

Ruddock, 55, assumed command of the Naval Gun Factory in June, 1946. A South Carolinian and an Annapolis graduate, he served as chief of the design and drafting division at the Navay Gun Factory from 1935 to 1938, and returned as director of the production division, Bureau of Ordnance, from 1940 to 1942. He wears the Navy Cross with gold star.

Jews Submit Palestine Plan

Jerusalem, March 9 (U.P.).—The Jewish Agency for Palestine has sent the United Nations a plan for creation of a provisional council of 32 members as the basis for a future Jewish state, it wasannounced today.

In the council there would be 12 members of the Jewish Agency executive; 14 members of Vaad Leumi, which is the Palestine national council; 2 Zionist revisionists, 2 members of the Agudath Israel Orthodox Organization, 1 Sephardic Jew and 1 Communist.

It was made known that in preparation for the general British withdrawal British officials were informed yesterday their families must be out of Palestine by March 31.

Tel Aviv dispatches reported members of the Jewish Haganah organization were negotiating with leaders of the extremist Stern Gang in an attempt to bring them, as well as the Irgun Zvai Leumi, into one organization.

U. N. Experts Dispute U. S. Palestine View

Lake Success, N. Y., March 9 (U.P.).—Legal and security experts of the United Nations secretariat, differing with the United States view, said today that the Security Council has power to enforce partition of Palestine with an international police force.

There were these other major developments in the tangled Palestine situation:

1. A high Soviet source said Russia insists that the U. N. program to split the Holy Land into Jewish and Arab states "must be carried out." The Russian official said some other powers, presumably the United States, France and China, seemed to want to "hesitate" about carrying out partition.

U. S. Appeals to Arabs

2. An official American spokesman, confirming an earlier United Press report, revealed the United States appealed to the Arab Higher Committee for an end of its boycott tactics and for participation in the current big power talks on partition.

3. A big power source said there had been "talk" of proposing postponement of partition and creation of a temporary U. N. trusteeship over Palestine.

4. Britain attended the emergency big power talks when they resumed today. British officials made it clear, however, that they would only provide requested information and would not join efforts to implement partition.

In the legal opinion, U. N. officials disagreed with the United States contention that a U. N. police force could not be used deliberately to inforce partition, but only to keep the peace. Secretary-General Trygve Lie and his assistants said it could do either, depending on the circumstances in Palestine.

Trieste Case Cited

The secretary argued that Palestine had been under international administration for many years. He said that if the Council could accept responsibility for Treste under a treaty (the Italian peace treaty) drawn up outside the U.N., "it is still more appropriate that it should accept responsibilities for the implementation of a plan adopted by the General Assembly."

The Soviet source who reemphasized Russian support for partition would not specify whether this means Russia would back creation of a U.N. force to help carry it out.

The American bid to the Arabs to join the big power talks was made unilaterally, without prior consultations with the other participants—Russia, China and France.

U. S. Efforts Outlined

The American spokesman said this country had been trying to persuade the Arab Higher Committee to make representatives available in New York for parleys with any big power that wanted to talk with them or with the Security Council as a whole, if that group decided to call them in.

The statement added that the United States was asking the seven Arab League states to use their influence in the move to end the Arab boycott.

Truman Gets Medal Like Washington's

A gold medal, similar to one presented to George Washington, was bestowed on President Truman yesterday by officers of the Philadelphia Society of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick.

The presentation was made by John W. Laird, president, Vincent A. Carroll, vice president, and John J. Reilly, an executive committeeman of the Philadelphia society.

Most Transportation Is Declared 'On Rocks'

By The Associated Press

Director J. M. Johnson of the Office of Defense Transportation told Senators yesterday the Nation's transportation is in a "deplorable condition."

"In spite of the volume, and volume should mean profits, every common carrier in America of persons or property, except buses and pipelines, is on the rocks," he testified to a Senate Interstate Commerce Subcommittee.

Johnson urged approval of a measure by Senator Capehart (R. Ind.) to set up a department of transportation at cabinet level.

4 U. N. 'Shorts' Deserve Billing

By Richard L. Coe

NATIONS: Whatever rocks it may be skirting, the United Nations became a real, heartening thing to an Interior Auditorium audience Monday night . . . The film board of the international organization showed four short pictures describing some aspects of U. N. . . . Watching them you thought, "Well, at least something's being done." . . . Made by one segment of U. N. members with the approval of all, here are pictures which can and will be shown all over the globe . . . Distribution, of course, is a problem; they're not quite the sort of thing a whole entertainment program can pay off on, but one could well be mixed into the usual sort of bill . . . Schools and organizations will be the most general means of showing them, however . . . "Maps We Live By," made for the U. N. by the Canadian Film Board, would add to any theater show . . . "First Steps" is strong watching, planned for use in India to picture rehabilitation for the physically handicapped; the workers who give their lives to this patient work are true heroes . . . "Searchlight on the Nations" and "Clearing the Way" picture how the world hears about U. N. work and the problem of planning for the permanent home on the East River . . . These two introspective shorts somehow reflect the tentative, yet hopeful, early stages of an organization that must work; for that reason they should have the widest possible distribution.

MYSTERY: In the theater you never can tell . . . You find raggedly produced operettas like "Blossom Time" and "The Student Prince" packing them into the National to the tune of $26,000 a week . . . Along comes "The Chocolate Soldier," a musical you'd expect would have much the same appeal, obviously produced with more care and boasting, for instance, downright good settings by such a top-flighter as Jo Mielziner and costumes by expert Lucinda Ballard . . . The Oscar Straus score, from "My Hero" on, is lilting and familiar . . . Yet we dropped in the other night to find the orchestra one-third filled . . . Only solution to this little question (which must make the producers wonder if two and two really do make four) is that our town has had its fill of operettas this season; had the musical arrived earlier it might have fared better . . . Still, it's a trim, pleasant musical with likeable players, and if you enjoy operettas you should have a pleasant visit.

DISAPPEARANCE: Speaking of the "Soldier" reminds us of the piece in this spac ethe other day about leading m anKeith Andes . . . One sentence made no sense (well, the one we're thinking of): it's one of those things that happen on the best regulated newspapers . . . The point about that mysterious Andes missing line was that "those beliefs of his—that education is the hope of the world—" must have wound up on the composing room floor . . . It was important to the whole story about the guy who'd like to teach, but finds a better living in the theater . . . Keith's now mulling three good possibilities for next season, so it looks as if the school board's loss is the producers' gain.

QUESTION: At the Children's Theater morning matinee at Lisner was a little 7-year-old boy with a head like a white orange, cropped to the point of being hairless . . . He might have stepped from a Charles Addams New Yorker cartoon, a truly frightening little chap . . . Played with a flashlight and mumbled caustc comments to an even younger companion . . . As the curtain went down on the first act, he turned round to 6-year-old Polly Hopkins, ignored the hulking elder who was with her and asked, "Is there any more to this thing?" . . . Maybe you'll see him yourself at the next in the series, "Heide," on April 3.

LEASE: "The Bishop's Wife," which was to make way this morning for "The Senator Was Indiscreet," has renewed its hold on Keith's for another week.

RETURN: "The Barber of Seville," which had a few nights some months back or the Constitution Hall screen, returns to town this morning at the Little . . . Ferrucio Tagliavini sings Almaviva with the orchestra and chorus of the Rome Opera House . . . Operatic explanations are inserted by the authoritative Deems Taylor . . . Another return is slated tomorrow: the Columbia offers "The Song of Bernadette," which won five Academy Awards in 1944 . . . Jennifer Jones became a star in this one; William Eythe, Charles Bickford, Gladys Cooper and Lee J. Cobb are featured . . . Another old favorite comes back to the Apex Friday for a one-day stay: "One Hundred Men and a Girl," the Deanna Durbin-Leopold Stokowski musical.

JOB: You don't find them putting want ads in the papers when a drama critic's spot opens up, and the New Republic hasn't broken precedents with the departure of Irwin Shaw . . . The playwright didn't spend much time on the critical bench he so often attacked before joining it . . . He's now left the weekly to do some work on his first novel . . . Taking over is Harold Clurman, coproducer of "All My Sons" and cofounder of the Group Theater, for which he staged "Awake and Sing," "The Gentle People" and "Golden Boy" . . . Clurman's book, "The Fervent Years," told of the Group Theater's career . . . He's written many magazine articles, so the deadline world won't be new to him.

TRYOUTS: The Mount Vernon Players tonight will be holding tryouts for their last offering of the season, Jacinto Benavente's "Bonds of Interest." . . . Director Helen Brewer will see people at the group's HQ, 900 Mass. ave., or call her at DIstrict 1484.

Chicago Doctor to Speak

Dr. Charles Huggins, professor of surgery at the University of Chicago Medical School, will speak at the fourth evening meeting of the National Cancer Institute at 7:45 o'clock tonight in Wilson Hall at the National Institute of Health, Bethesda, Md. His topic will be "Diagnosis of Disease by Enzyme Methods."

LADD AND LAKE: Alan and Veronica warm up the Warner screen for the week beginning tomorrow in Paramount's "Saigon," an adventure yarn of the Far East

Hedda Hopper's Hollywood

Hollywood.—Gregory Peck, who is taking a well-earned rest in Nassau, will be back on the old merry-go-round as soon as he arrives in Hollywood. When he finishes "The Yellow Sky" for Twentieth, he moves to Metro for "The Great Sinner." It's the story of an inveterate gambler whose addiction loses him everything, from his property to his wife's love. When he hits bottom he meets a girl who also has the gambling bug. In trying to reform her he regenerates himself. Barbara Stanwyck would be perfect for the lady.

Gottfried Reinhardt will produce . . . There is yet no script on "12 o'Clock High," which Darryl Zanuck bought for Peck. The book itself won't hit the stands until April. Jane Wyman returned to Hollywood to take her 3-year-old son to the hospital to have his tonsils removed. She is staying at home, but Ronnie Reagan is living elsewhere. When I asked about her divorce, she said, "I've made no decision. I'm just going to sit tight and smile at all you lovely people. When I have an important decision, I'll call you" . . . While driving here with a girl friend, Jane heard a radio flash from Denver announcing that she (Jane) had left Las Vegas for Reno, but her car had smashed into a gasoline truck. She turned to her friend and asked, "Well, how do I look?" Said she, "It gives you a spooky feeling to be riding peacefully along and get the news of your own crackup."

Refusal of U. S. to Buy Flour Lowers Grain Prices Briefly

Government refusal Monday to buy flour for export at prices quoted by most of the Nation's mills, sent grain prices down again yesterday. Around noon, however, they strengthened. Some futures closed slightly above Monday.

After the close, the Production and Marketing Administration announced that again it had asked 300 flour mills for flour. The offers must be filled by 5 o'clock tonight. No specific amount was named but previous announcements indicated the need of the equivalent of 8,600,000 bushels of wheat for April shipments.

New York stocks were lower in quiet trading yesterday, with declines outnumbering advances three to one. Commodities ranged as follows:

Wheat finished from 1¼ cents higher to 2⅛ lower.

Corn was 1 cent higher to 2⅞ lower.

Cotton, which suffered a sharp decline Monday, was $2 to $3.15 a bale (500 pounds) higher in New York.

Hog prices were $1 a hundred pounds lower in St. Louis to $1 higher in St. Paul.

Cattle were steady, but wholesale beef prices were up half a cent a pound.

Soybeans dropped the full eight cents permitted in one day's trading.

Best grade butter tumbled a cent in New York to 75½ cents a pound—a new 1948 low.

2 Beltsville Cafes Lose License Appeals

Judge Charles C. Marbury of Prince Georges Circuit Court in Upper Marlboro, Md., yesterday upheld denial of liquor licenses to two Beltsville restaurants. Christine Schleehauf and Roland E. and Fannie J. Kidwell were refused on-sale licenses after hearings before the County Board of Liquor License Commissioners.

The appeals were rejected on grounds that there were enough places selling liquor in Beltsville.

Alabama Negro Fatally Beaten In Row Over Civil Rights

Mobile, Ala., March 9 (AP).—A white mechanic said in a statement to police today he beat a Negro to death in an argument over President Truman's civil rights program.

Dr. H. S. J. Walker, county coroner, said the Negro, Rayfield Davis, 53, had been "badly beaten." He returned a verdict of murder.

The mechanic, Horace M. Miller, 20, surrendered to Mobile police with his attorney. He signed a statement he beat the Negro with his fists and kicked him, police said.

Invited For Drink

Miller said the Negro told him, "President Truman is our good friend and he will give us our civil rights."

"He was at that time referring to the civil rights program being published by our President," Miller's statement said.

Both men were employed at the Brookley Air Force base.

In his statement Miller said he and Davis alighted from a bus Sunday night. Davis, whom he said he had not known, approached him with the greeting, "Hey, buddy" and invited him to his house for a drink.

Talked of Racial Equality

Miller said the Negro started talking about racial equality and the President's civil rights program.

"This sort of talk kept making me madder and I struck him once with my bare left hand and he fell to the sidewalk," he continued.

Miller said that when the Negro started fumbling in his coat pocket for what he though was a knife or gun, he kicked him several times and left him lying on the ground.

He said he did not know about the Negro's death until he read about it in the paper yesterday.

U. S. Moves to Deport Plant Worker as Red

The Justice Department has moved to deport a Niles, Ohio, gypsum plant worker on the ground he has been a Communist.

In announcing its action yesterday the department listed the man as Leonid Nikoloev, alias Leon Callow. It said he has been in this country since 1915, has an American wife, and is the father of eight children who are citizens because they were born in this country.

Unknown Slain GI To Get Highest Medal

An unknown American serviceman killed in World War II will receive the Congressional Medal of Honor.

President Truman yesterday signed a bill authorizing the award. The Army sponsored the legislation.

The unidentified member of the armed forces who receives the award will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

An unknown soldier was so honored after World War I.

Supreme Court Ruling to Halt Montgomery Religious Classes

religious groups of school buildings for Sunday church services In a number of new subsurban communities, this has been a practice while church groups sought funds to build their own structures.

District Not Affected

District school officials explained yesterday that there is at present no religious education instruction in the public schools. Dr. Hobart M. Corning, school superintendent, said that ministers of various faiths are invited, like other community leaders, to address school assemblies, but never on sectarian subjects.

Dr. Carl F. Hansen, associate school superintendent, pointed out that in January of 1947, the librarian for the Supreme Court had requested information from the District of Columbia school authorities on what their policy was on religious teaching.

One question asked was what provision for religious education on "released" time (giving school children time off during school hours) is found in Board of Education rules.

The board told the Supreme Court official that the rules do not provide for released time for religious education. On July 1, 1942, the Board of Education approved a recommendation of the superintendent of schools that an experiment in religious education for public schools be tried outside the public school hours, either immediately following public school instruction or on Saturday morning, because "the superintendent does not look with favor on any plan to release time now prescribed for the program of public education."

Bible Excerpts Read

Robert L. Haycock, former superintendent of District schools and for 33 years Sunday school superintendent at West Washington Baptist Church, said that at the time the action was taken it was believed by the board and school administrators that the curriculum would be impaired by taking away from children the amount of school time devoted to hours of religious instruction.

The board also told the Supreme Court that its rules on Bible reading are that excerpts shall be read at opening exercises "without note or comment" and that the Lord's Prayer shall be said.

Nondenominational services are being conducted in the city for public school youth in at least one area. Miss Nell S. Hiscox, principal of the Janney Public School at Wisconsin ave. and Albemarle st. nw., said that the school's parent-teacher association began the services several years ago when a great deal of discussion was being given to the general subject of juvenile delinquency.

She said the move did not have active sponsorship of the school, any more than any P-TA action binds the school. The services are held four to six weeks a year, with one meting a week before the morning school session opens. Attending ministers were of Episcopal, Methodist, Baptist and Jewish faiths, representing churches in the area of the school.

Greeted With Mixed Reaction

The Supreme Court decision was greeted with mixed reactions by religious leaders.

It was labeled a "step in the right direction" by the Rev. Thomas Steen, director of the Christian education department of the Federation of Churches.

Charles S. Longacre, secretary of the Religious Liberty Association of the Seventh-Day Adventists, Takoma Park, described it is "not hostile to religion but friendly toward it . . . both religion and the State prosper and enjoy friendly relations better under a program of complete separation than under a comingling of functions."

Dr. Sizoo Differs

A different view was taken by Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, president of the New Brunswick, N. J., Theological Seminary and former pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, in Washington for preaching engagements.

Dr. Sizoo charged that the schools are "now being forbidden by the court to give spiritual content to education. Education in a democracy is never safe if it is to be lacking the content of spiritual values. It is rather regrettable that in he public mind ecclesiasticism should be confused with spiritual values. The problem which rests before the country now is how it shall educate its children in spiritual values. This is now a very grave and great responsibility."

Sympathy with Justice Reed's minority report was expressed by Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church, who declared, "I feel that the institutions of the church and government should be kept separate but that religion and government must mix.

"We need religion in government. I hope that the Supreme Court decision will not defeat the progress that has been made in giving released time for religious instruction."

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Publicity Urged In Bank Frauds

New York, March 9 (Spl).—A social evil such as bank embezzlement cannot be corrected by ignoring it, Lester A. Pratt told the Saving Banks Auditors and Comptrollers Forum at a meeting here tonight.

Pratt, a Washington accountant specializing in bank examinations and fraud investigations, pointed out that there is a growing sentiment among bank supervisory and law enforcement agencies that frauds should be made public.

"There are bankers," said, "who still cling to the outmoded theory that bank frauds should not be made public for fear that some of the methods employed by embezzlers might be utilized by bank employes. This argument has little support . . . because the means for misappropriation of funds and concealment of the crime are usually known to the employe before the desire to steal occurs. Also during the years the publication of bank frauds was considered taboo, the number of these crimes and the amount of the losses steadily increased . . ."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 9 (AP).—Grain futures followed an irregular course at the Board of Trade today. Prices were off sharply at the opening under the depressing influence of Government refusal to purchase any great amount of flour at prices offered by mills.

About midseason a rally stated by commission houses and cash interests lifted prices from the day's low, but the rally was not sustained. When demand dried up prices again slumped. Just before the close shorts started to cover and found offerings limited. Prices spurted upward, with the result most deliveries closed above the previous finish.

At the close wheat was 1¼ to 2⅛ higher than the previous finish; May, 2.35¼@2.35⅛. Corn was 1 cent higher to 2⅛ lower, May, 2.13@2.13¼. Oats were ¼ lower to 1⅝ higher, May, 1.10½@1.10¾. Soybeans were 8 cents lower, March, 3.50.

The opening break came as the result of yesterday's after-the-close announcement that the Department of Agriculture has rejected most of the flour offers from mills to fill April export quotas.

N. & W. Gross Rises, but Net Drops in Year

By S. Oliver Goodman

Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co. reported operating revenues of $604,109 for 1947, compared with $516,212 in the previous year.

Odell Smith

Odell S. Smith, secretary-treasurer pointed out that the year's operating expenses soared to $572,523. Net income for the year, as a result, slumped to $6051 after taxes, compared with 1946 net of $21,365. Net per share was $1.21 with 1946 net of $21,365. Net per share was $1.21 last year, against $4.27 in 1946. Smith this month has completed 50 years of service in an executive capacity with the 58-year-old steamship line.

Clarence F. Norment, jr., president of Norfolk & Washington, in his statement to stockholders, said the management had looked into the possibility of acquiring Government surplus vessels. Conversion costs would be too great, it was decided.

The company lost two boats to the Government during the war, leaving it with only the District of Columbia. This boat runs on an every-other-day schedule.

Norment also said that the management had decided it was unwise to build a new ship at present-day costs. When the Southland and Northland (taken over by Navy in 1942) were built in 1909 and 1911, respectively, each cost $400,000. The District of Columbia, built in 1925, cost $800,000. Present day cost of assembling another vessel of the District of Columbia type was estimated at $3,500,000 by Norment.

All officers and directors were reelected at the annual meeting Monday in company offices at 685 Maine ave, sw.

Same Old Yanks: 5 Runs in 9th Top Tigers, 8-6

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., MARCH 9.—The baseball people, the club owners, that is, have discovered that their television rights are gushing big profits and they're in a frenzy to make the most of it. They're getting a big price right now but the whole business is so new and gigantic and burgeoning into fantastic proportions they wonder if they're not selling too cheaply.

POVICH

The Yankees are getting $50,000 for their video privileges, aside from their radio revenue but there are a hundred radio sets in New York for every television set. In a few years the take from the television will dwarf the radio income. The two big leagues are wondering what kind of a bonanza they've struck.

Right now, Ford Frick, president of the National League, has a staff of television experts, working with charts and graphs and surveys and doing research on a grand scale. There's a belief that despite the nice prices they're getting, they're practically giving the product away, or at least haven't tapped the market for all that it's worth.

IN WASHINGTON last year, Clark Griffith gave away the television rights for half the season as an experiment. When he finally put a price on the privileges, television paid him more of a scale for the final half of the season than did radio despite the fact that there were fewer than 1500 television sets in the District of Columbia.

This year, Griffith's radio rights sold for the usual price but he found sponsors willing to pay twice as much for the television privilege. The price, was in fact, so high that the local firms who were the sponsors last year had to drop out of the 1948 bidding. Only a national advertiser could handle the big nut, but they were eager. The Ford Company will sponsor the video broadcasts of the Nats' games this season.

Every club in the big leagues except Pittsburgh will have their games televised. The Pirates' owners are taking a loss because television is not yet feasible in that area—too much mountainous terrain. Even the radio broadcasts around Pittsburgh go freakish sometimes due to the heavy presence of ore in the mountains. Until the engineers catch up with the problem, the Pittsburgh owners will miss out on the video profits.

THE GROWTH OF TELEVISION is manifested by the Washington, D. C., figures of 1947 and 1948. Fifteen hundred sets of last season multiplied to an estimated 7000 sets this year. Immediately the price of the broadcasts went up and the television people have scarcely scratched the surface of potential sales of their sets. Television doesn't yet compete with radio as an advertising medium, but it will.

Even the television people admit that they haven't come close to perfecting their product. What they need mostly, they say, are better camera men who know baseball. The announcer is at the mercy of the camera man or engineer who selects the panel from which the announcer works. The announcers envision the day when they can make their own selection of camera shots with push-buttons, but that's a distant day.

The Yankees announced a couple of months ago that they would use the voices of Mel Allen and Russ Hodges, who do the radio broadcasts, for the television. But that's out, now. They gave up the whole idea because too much voice, too much running description ruins a television show in which the audience can see for itself what is happening. A special television announcer will be hired, and he'll keep his mouth shut when the play is obvious.

THERE ARE A COUPLE of things I never knew till now about television. For example, the television people frown when the sun is out, they'd rather televise action from the ball field on a cloudy day. Too much sun, too many of those annoying shadows. And night games are televised better than day games, thanks to a gadget called the image orthicon tube developed with radar during the war.

Just last year, subjects of television interviews sweated under the hot Kleig lights that were necessary to good transmission. The big lights are out now. Los Angeles television is rated the best, thanks to the transmitters on Mount Wilson. In Philadelphia, the statue of the founding father, William Penn, in City Hall Square, deflects the television beams from the sets of a considerable segment of the howling populace, which wants Billy P. dismantled pronto.

There are alarmists, too. Some people say television will be the ruination of good housekeeping. The housewife can turn on the soap operas and gad about the house as she likes, doing her work all the while. But if she tunes in on television, she's pinned to a set all morning, or afternoon as the case may be. The darn gadget is going to breed a nation of loafers, you hear.

Fenlon Here Today for Discussion Of GW Job

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Johnny Fenlon, considered the most likely successor to Skip Stahley as head football coach at George Washington University, will be here today to talk things over with Director of Athletics Max Farrington.

Cautiously, Farrington said there was no likelihood of Fenlon being signed today. The GW athletic head emphasized that other candidates are in the running and estimated that it will be some time before a definite choice is made.

Fenlon's attitude makes this seem doubly true. "I'm not seeking the GW job," he said yesterday. "I'm satisfied here at Fredericksburg and will have to receive a pretty interesting proposition before I'll decide to return to college coaching."

The school wants to engage an all-alumni coaching staff. Fenlon, 39, was a three-sport athlete at GW in the early '30s and ranks with Tuffy Leemans as the other halfback on the all-time Colonial football team.

Leemans can't spare time from his profitable laundry business here to take a full-time coaching job. He is interested, though, in serving as backfield coach on a part-time basis.

Other candidates mentioned for the top job include Harry Deming, who has compiled a creditable over - all record at Arlington's Washington-Lee High, and Red Strader, assistant coach of the New York Yankees of the All-America Conference.

The latter is not a GW alumnus but Farrington said he would be sounded out if efforts to secure a graduate coaching staff are not successful.

Coached Richmond

At present, Fenlon is director of athletics at Fredericksburg, Va., High and also director of the town's recreation system. After his graduation in 1932, he started coaching at Fredericksburg High.

He went to Richmond University in 1938 as freshman coach and was named head coach in 1942. His team won three, lost six and tied one. The high spot of that year was holding highly favored William and Mary, Southern Conference champion, to a 10-0 score.

After that one season, Fenlon enlisted in the Navy as a lieutenant, j.g., in the athletic program and was assigned to Navy Pre-Flight at Chapel Hill, N. C. He returned to Richmond after the war for two seasons, winning 9, losing 9 and tying 2.

Fenlon, or anyone who takes the job, will be faced with unique problems. Although GW has an enrollment of 14,000, athletic facilities are extremely poor. The football team has had to use a public field on Frog Island, across the Potomac on the Virginia side, and the Sidwell Friends field for practice sessions.

Middlecoff, Ferrier Win Miami Golf

Miami, Fla., March 9 (AP).—Jim Ferrier and Cary Middlecoff won the $10,000 Miami International Four-Ball Golf Tournament today one up in 36 holes after nearly tossing it away.

They defeated Ellsworth Vines and Ed Furgol with a par 4 on the 285-yard thirty-sixth hole in the finals. The victory was worth $1250 each to the winners and $750 to each of the runners-up.

Ferrier, PGA champion from San Francisco, elected to go for a birdie on the thirty-fifth hole but his 18-foot putt was 3 feet short of the cup and he missed it to go 1 over. Middlecoff, of Memphis, Tenn., on whom Ferrier was depending for a par, missed a 3-foot putt and Vines sank his for a par 4 to even the match.

On the thirty-sixth, Ferrier was 25 feet from the cup in two, dropped his approach shot within 18 inches of the cup and sank it for a par four. Vines missed a six-foot putt and Furgol a five-footer to go one over. Middlecoff didn't have to put.

The Ferrier-Middlecoff combination had held a one up lead from the twenty-ninth hole when the 24-year-old Middlecoff sank a 25-foot putt for a birdie two.

Middlecoff, who turned pro only a year ago, then birdied the next two holes but his play was matched by that of Vines, the reformed tennis player from Los Angeles, and Furgol of Pontiac, Mich.

In Gambling Probe:

N. Y. Ranger Draws Life Ban, Bruin Suspended Indefinitely

Lansing, Mich., March 9 (AP).—Billy Taylor of the New York Rangers was expelled for life today and Don Gallinger of the Boston Bruins was suspended indefinitely on charges growing out of a gambling probe.

National Hockey League President Clarence S. Campbell of Montreal announced the drastic action to Gov. Kim Sigler following an exhaustive investigation.

Campbell said in a prepared statement that he had sufficient evidence to show that the 28-year-old Taylor had "knowingly associated with and communicated with James Tamer, a criminal and known gambler."

Hockey league officials in Montreal said the expulsion of Taylor means he is "out of organized hockey for life with no right of appeal."

Taylor, who was expelled for conduct "prejudicial to and against the welfare of hockey," said he was "surprised" at the news when informed at his home in Oshawa, Ont.

He said he knew some persons active in gambling, but added "I never have been asked to bet on the outcome of a game."

Gallinger, 23, a resident of Port Colborne, Ontario, was suspended by the league president "pending further investigation of his associations with James Tamer, the Detroit criminal and gambler."

Both players had been under suspicion since shortly after the revelation by Detroit police that the betting deal took place.

Taylor, supposedly injured and out of condition, had played only parts of two games for the Rangers since being traded to them by the Bruins on February 6 for Grant (Knobby) Warwick.

Sunday he left the club and went to his home in Oshawa, Ontario, claiming "I just got fed up with being hounded by newspapermen and other people."

Came From Detroit

Taylor, a 29-year-old center, had been traded by the Detroit club to Boston for Armand (Bep) Guidolin at the start of this season. Last year he was the third highest scorer in the league but this year, particularly since his switch to the Rangers, he had been virtually useless.

He had been in 41 games, 39 with Boston, and had scored only four goals and 16 assists for 20 points. That was far from his best season in 1942 when he made 60 points for Toronto. He was with Toronto from 1939 until traded to Detroit. He spent three years, from 1943 to 1945, in the Canadian army.

Gallinger, who is only 22, was a veteran of five years with Boston despite his youth. He was in the Canadian army in 1944 and 1945 and when he returned was regarded as one of the best young prospects in the National League.

This season he had played in 54 games and was tied for twenty-fourth place in the league's individual scoring list with 10 goals and 21 assists for 31 points. He

Gallinger Appeals

Boston, March 9 (AP).—Bruins' Center Don Gallinger late today filed an appeal with National Hockey League President Clarence Campbell who earlier had suspended the Boston forward on charges of being associated with gamblers.

Protesting his innocence, the reddish blond-haired young Canadian reiterated to hockey writers that he had "never bet on a hockey game."

Lions Finally Down Flyers

The Washington Lions won their first game in six starts this season against the St. Louis Flyers, 4-2, before a slim crowd of 1000 last night at Uline Arena.

Hero of the occasion was Pat Wilson, Lion defense man, whose two last-period goals clinched the decision.

The Lions stepped out to a 2-0 first period lead on goals by Bob Walton and Frank Porteous.

D. C. Outdrawing Baltimore Crowds At Sports Show

Washington attendance at the All-American Outdoor Sports Show, currently running at the National Guard Armory, is topping Baltimore crowds at a similar exposition held in the Monumental City last month, Leo J. Paulin, comanager with Richard B. Hall, said last night.

More than 80,000 people will see the show in 10 days, ending March 16, Paulin predicted. "With the exception of weekends, Washington doesn't appear to be a matinee town. However, our night crowds have been splendid. The coming weekend should bring more capacity crowds."

Paulin praised the armory's facilities for big shows and said the success of the present one, sponsored by the nonprofit League of Maryland Sportsmen, indicates the armory, despite its location, will draw with popular attractions.

Coast Guard Ends Hunt for Snider

Miami, Fla., March 9 (AP).—The Coast Guard ended its search today for Jockey Al Snider and two companions missing since Friday aboard a 16-foot boat off the coast of Florida.

The Coast Guard, Army and Navy planes and dozens of boats have searched the sea and the Florida Keys without finding a trace of Snider; Don Frazier, Toronto, and C. H. (Tobey) Trotter, Miami horse trainer.

Three friends offered a reward of $5000 today to anyone giving information leading to the safe return of the missing trio.

Wilson Takes Title

The 17-and-under championship of the D. C. Recreation Department Basketball League went to Wilson yesterday as it downed Gordon, 49-16, at the Wilson court.

John Lindell Makes Three Hits, Drives In Four Runs

Lakeland, Fla., March 9 (AP).—Using rookie pitchers and only four of their World Series championship array of last fall, the New York Yankees came from behind with five runs in the ninth to beat the Detroit Tigers, 8-6, in the first 1948 exhibition for each team.

John Lindell got three singles, and drove in four runs, including the pair that won the game.

Art Houtteman, who fanned four in the first two innings he worked, wilted in the ninth and was slapped for seven hits in a rally started by Rookie Jerry Coleman.

Clarence Marshall, third of four Yankee pitchers, received credit for the victory. Frank Hiller, pitching the last of the ninth for the Yankees, held the Tigers in check, getting Neil Berry on called strikes for the final out, after Pat Mullin hit a pinch triple.

Reds Bury Phils

Tampa, Fla., March 9 (AP).—Three young Redlegs broke out with home runs, good for eight markers, today as Cincinnati buried the Philadelphia Phillies, 13-3, in the opening game of the spring training season here.

Rookie Ted Kluszewski connected for a three-run circuit drive to give the Reds a 4-1 lead in the first inning.

Hank Sauer, who hit 50 homers in the International League last season, banged one over the left field wall in the fourth and scored behind Grady Hatton to spark a five-run inning.

The final round-tripper, a three-run blow, came in the seventh by Clyde Vollmer, who was a second string outfielder with the Reds in 1947.

Cubs Lead in Homers

The Chicago Cubs, who finished next to last in the National League home run derby in 1947, are leading in the Major Leagues in this specialty in the Grape Fruit League.

In three games, all against the Chicago White Sox, the Cubs have slapped six homers. Rookies Clarence Maddern and Earl York socked two apiece and recruits Rube Walker and Henry Schenz the others.

The White Sox are next in this department with four. Dave Philley and rookies Gus Zernial Gordon Goldsberry and Vincent Plumbo have contributed one apiece.

All told, 17 homers have been hit so far with rookies contributing 11 of the blows and veterans the remaining six. Only Maddern and York have collected as many as two.

Sain Offer Boosted

Bradenton, Fla., March 9 (U.P.) General Manager John Quinn of the Boston Braves said today he had made a new salary offer to holdout pitching star, Johnny Sain, who said he would "think it over."

For Nat 'Sluggers'

Kuhel Wishes 'Mental' Hits Would Count

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 9.—Joe Kuhel is cocking his managerial ear in prayerful hope of the sound of some base hits from the bats of the young men in Washington uniforms here. "I can't think any runs across the plate," he said today, "nor can any other manager."

The Nats' weakness was apparent to Kuhel from the time he took the job last October, and he needed no great insight into the club to spot it. Washington was the worst hitting team in the league last season and he's prizing anybody who can whale the ball a bit.

There are a lot of rookies with fancy batting averages in camp, but the trouble is they are minor league batting averages—none as high as a triple-A league; Kuhel is wondering what his kids will do against big league pitching.

It's Up to Coan

Gil Coan brings a .338 figure from Chattanooga in the Southern Association, liberally sprinkled with extra base hits and he represents the No. 1 hope of Kuhel. Little Al Kozar hit .339 in the Southern and could be adequate, but the rest of the rookies are Class B graduates, or lower.

A young man who will get a long look is Dean Stafford, the big-chested outfielder from the Big State League in Texas, a Class B circuit where he belted .378, hit 40 homers and drove in the whooping total of 175 runs. He was hitting in small parks but he's big enough to be undismayed by the big league fences. His Texas colleague, Larry Drake, also batted .345 in the Big State League.

Otherwise in his outfield he is gambling on Coan to make good and Sherry Robertson to improve. Robertson, an extra base threat, was held to a .233 average last season and scarcely distinguished himself. The man they got from Boston in the Spence trade to play center field is Leon Culbertson, a .238 hitter last season.

What a Sight!

Around the infield Kuhel sees Mickey Vernon (.265), Johnny Sullivan (.256) and Eddie Yost (.238). The clubs' pitchers see 'em too, and what their reaction might be is an easy guess. They'll have to struggle to win ball games.

What the natives call Orlando's unseasonable rain came down for the third day in a row today and caused postponement of the workout until this afternoon . . . everybody is viewing the late starting date of March 1 as a mistake . . . the club's first intrasquad game, scheduled for tomorrow, will be a six-inning affair with the B team boasting the best pitchers in Sid Hudson and Chic Pieretti . . . Pieretti, who claims to can't pitch relief ball, and has proved it, says he deserves more of a starting chance than he got last season . . . Clarence Difana, who insists that he be called Jay Difana, continued to belt the longest b alls in the batting drill, and if he can play third base a little bit he's a serious contender for Eddie Yost's job . . . the best outfielder on the club, Earl Wooten, won't play regularly. His hitting potential isn't enough, but he'll be retained as

Golfers Meet At Kenwood

In an effort to promote closer harmony between the Professional Golfers Association and the United States Golf Association, two leading professional golf officials will meet with Middle Atlantic golf professionals Monday morning at the Kenwood Country Club.

That evening the Maryland State Golf Association will hold a dinner at Kenwood to discuss methods for better control of handicaps at member clubs. All of the professionals at the morning session as well as golf committee chairman of Maryland clubs will attend the dinner.

Tom Crane, executive secretary of the PGA, and George Corcoran, vice president, will address the professionals on the subject of new rules and explain the workings of the new PGA legislative group headed by George Schneiter.

Among the rules to be clarified are the subjects of grooved faces on clubs and number of clubs permitted in PGA tournament play. The Middle Atlantic PGA tournament schedule will also be drawn up at the morning meeting.

Nats Pacify Union

Orlando, Fla., March 9.—Union trouble raised its head in the Washington training camp today and the Nats were forced to two-time it for movie photographers.

As movie takers for a television company put the Washington players through prolonged paces, an outfit of newsreel men refused to participate in the same operation. They objected to the presence of a nonunion photographer for the television people.

So in deference to the union camera men, Manager Joe Kuhel called out his squad a second time for exclusive poses by the union photographers.

Wyoming Named To NCAA Tourney

Chicago, March 9 (AP).—The University of Wyoming with a season record of 18 wins and 7 defeats today was selected to represent District 7 in the Kansas City NCAA Basketball Tournament, March 19-20.

The selection was announced by Arthur (Dutch) Lonborg of Northwestern University, chairman of the NCAA Tournament, who served as a temporary member of the District 7 selection committee.

'Skins Sign Nussbaumer

Bob Nussbaumer, the hungry scrambler who set a Washington Redskin pass-catching record last year, has signed his 1948 contract with the local National Football League team, it was announced yesterday.

The 5-foot-11 halfback, a former University of Michigan star, was the twenty-nine player signed for '48 by the 'Skins. He will be seeing his second season of action in Washington.

Obtained from the Green Bay Packers, along with draft rights to Southern California's End John Ferraro, in a trade for Quarterback Jack Jacobs, Nussbaumer proved his brilliance in his first year.

With Sammy Baugh doing most of the pitching, Nussbaumer caught 47 tosses for 597 yards and four touchdowns. His efforts topped that of Steve Bagarus, former Redskin record-holder, and earned him second place in the league pass-snagging list.

Army Names Gym In Germany After Late Al Blozis

A new gymnasium erected near the United States military post, Frankfurt, Germany, will be named for Al Blozis, former Georgetown University football star and shot-put champion, it was announced today by Georgetown University officials.

Blozis Hall will bear the name of the second lieutenant who was killed in action while fighting with the Twenty-eighth Infantry Regiment during the Battle of the Bulge in France in January of 1945.

Blozis was an All-American honorable mention on the 1940 Georgetown football squad and holds world's records for the eight and 12-pound shot put.

12th Lap Was Overdoing It, But Earned a Medal, Anyway

New York, March 9 (AP).—Officials of the Intercollegiate AAAA, their faces a bit red, ordered a new set of medals today for five freshmen medley relay teams which unwittingly ran into an extra lap in a special event during the IC4A indoor track meet here February 28.

It happened this way:

The freshmen medley relay, which did not count toward the team title, was run in two sections with the four men on each team covering legs of 880, 440 and 220 yards and 1 mile.

Princeton won the first section, followed by Boston University, Northeastern, Villanova and St. John's. Holy Cross, New York University, Seton Hall, Rhode Island State and Yale finished in that order in the second division.

When times were compared, it was discovered that all five teams in the first section were faster than the winner of the second. Results were based on comparative times and the medals given for the first five places were awarded to teams in the first section.

However, it was discovered later that the milers in the second section ran 12 times around the track at Madison Square Garden instead of the required 11 laps.

Meet Director Asa Bushnell said today the IC4A had no alternative but to consider the two sections as separate races. Therefore, he said, a duplicate set of medals has been ordered and will be presented to Holy Cross, NYU, Seton Hall, Rhode Island and Yale.

What Can Chicago Have?

Browns Shut Out Cubs, 7-0; Priddy Smacks 2-Run Homer

Los Angeles, Calif., March 9. The supposedly hopeless St. Louis Browns manhandled the proud Chicago Cubs, 7-0, in an exhibition game here today.

Leading the way was none other than Gerry Priddy, Washington castoff, who banged a two-run homer in the first inning. Whitey Platt, a Cub alumnus, also accounted for a three-run homer against Rookie Pitcher Howard Auman in his three-inning stretch.

Platt added two singles to lead the 14-hit attack against four Chicago pitchers.

Tracks Plan Improvements

Baltimore, March 9 (AP).—Two Maryland tracks were authorized today to improve their horse racing plants and a third, Marlboro, was given tentative approval to operate onassurance it would rebuild.

The Maryland Racing Commission approved requests of Laurel to withdraw $275,000 and Bowie $277,000 from the improvement fund held by the State. The fund, started in 1943, comes from one-half of one per cent of the mutuel receipts at all mile tracks.

The commissioners in juggling dates for the half-mile tracks next summer, only tentatively approved the Marlboro meeting. The commission told the Marlboro management it would have to submit a signed contract for rebuilding its plant before the meeting, and show that the work would start as soon as the meeting ends.

The new half mile dates are: Cumberland, July 20-31; Hagerstown, August 3-14; Marlboro, August 18-28; Timonium, September 1-11; Bel Air, September 15-25.

Locals Have Lost Last Five in Row

Washington's sagging Capitols attempt to break a five game losing streak and at the same time get back into the running for a playoff berth when they face the Chicago Stags tonight at Uline Arena.

The Stags are currently tied with the St. Louis Bombers for first place in the Western Division of the Basketball Associaton of America, while the Caps are solidly entrenched in last place.

Stags Have 4-3 Edge

In the last two meetings between the teams, the Stags came off victors. First they trounced the Caps here, then a few days later outlasted the D. C. quintet in an overtime thriller in Chicago. In seven games between the clubs, the Stags have taken four.

Washington must win tonight to escape virtual elimination from the playoffs. The Caps have won two less games than the Stags and have lost three more.

However, the Caps will have a chance to gain a little ground on the third place Baltimore Bullets, who have won two more games than the Caps and have lost the same number as the Washington team.

Leading the Stags is Max Zaslofsky, always a thorn in the side of the Caps. The slender Chicago sharp-shooter has taken the Association scoring lead away from Joe Fulks and now has 813 points in 41 games. In his last outing he set a Chicago Stadium record as he tossed 40 points through the hoop against Providence.

McKinney In Shape

But with Bones McKinney back in shape after missing four games with a sprained ankle, the Caps figure their chances are good against the league leaders.

They remember only too well that the Stags knocked them out of the playoffs last season and would rather beat Chicago than any club in the league.

No Potatoe Chips:

Poker Game Foodless as Gals Strike

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

AUNT AGATHA staged this week's family poker game, but, before I go into the terrible details, I want to clear up a little matter.

Haight

Recently, in describing the hardships of keeping the game going despite the food, I wrote, "The cards must be dealt over, under and around a sea of potato chips, pickles, etc."

The copyreader, a stickler for detail, deleted the word "under," figuring I was overdoing it a bit. However, if you have been mixed up in this women vs. men pasteboard hokus-pokus you will understand.

With wild and woolly games stylish, the word "pass" has ceased to be identified with the actual card playing, but it remains the most used four-letter word around the table—or, on second thought, is it?

Anyway, it's "Pass the crackers" and "Pass the pickles" until they make Sammy Baugh look like a piker.

And brother, when they're passing, you're dealing "under," if you know what I mean!

GETTING back to this week's game, I have to report the women went on strike.

My first column on our poker made a hit with the gals but it seems my second piece, dealing with their sarcastic handling of situations involving the men, got under their skins.

Uncle Les, our banker, had the chips counted out and change ready but when he yelled, "Play ball," the women simply continued with their conversation.

Cousin Hilda got out some goods she had bought for a spring suit and held it up against Aunt Jen with one hand and displayed the pattern in the other.

Cousin Dick wandered out to dining room table, followed by Uncle Fred and me.

Les called, "Aren't you girls going to play?"

A chorus of "no" was the answer.

"We note in the paper that we have been crimping your style," explained Jen in an uppy voice. "So we decided we'd let you have your own way this time. Just go ahead and have your little game."

WE MEN began to play.

Well, you know in the years "B. W."—before women, in poker—we never seemed to hear the gals in the living room. However, the din now was terrific. Fred admitted after we had played five minutes that he stayed with three treys and ended up with a pair, having discarded a trey by mistake in the confusion.

I dropped out once when I would have won the pot, if I had called, because I was trying to recall Uncle Paul Miller's mother's maiden name in response to a demand from the married woman I live with.

For the most part, we played straight stud and draw. I itched to play "Follow the Queen" or "Albany Night Boat" or one of the other super-wild games, but every time I dealt, the women seemed to cock their ears.

When the gals tired of talking, they tuned in "John's Other Life" or something like that. It was next to impossible to concentrate on cards, with some guy blurting on the radio in the living room and Hilda babbling on the phone in the sun parlor.

I WAS getting a little hungry and smiled to myself when Agatha went to the kitchen. She banged around the pots (cooking, that is) and pans and I sauntered out to get a sneak preview of the food.

"What are we having, Agatha?" I asked.

"Nothing," she snapped. "We're not going to fix anything tonight. I'm baking a cake I promised to donate to the Ladies Aid."

I whispered the sad news to the men and Les muttered, "No food, eh? And, being banker, I've got to buy all those chips back. Big loser—and no chance to eat myself even."

Just then Jen, his better half, came in, tapped Les on the shoulder and said quietly, "Come on, Dream Boat. Break up the game, we got to get home."

"But it's only 11 o'clock, Jen," he protested.

"Well," she came back, "you men wanted your poker game as it was in the old days. You've got it."

DON'T RUN OVER MY LITTLE GIRL...

Dear Driver

Today, my daughter, who is seven years old, started to school as usual. Her cocker spaniel, whose name is "Scoot," sat on the front porch and whined as she waved "goodby."

Tonight we talked about school—she told me about the girl with the yellow curls—and the boy across the aisle who makes funny faces. We talked about a lot of things—tremendously vital and unimportant things, then we studied spelling, reading and arithmetic and—then to bed.

She's sound asleep with "Princess Elizabeth" (that's a doll) cuddled in her right arm. You guys wouldn't hurt her, would you? You see, I'm her daddy. When her doll is broken, or her finger is cut, or her head gets bumped, I can fix it—but when she starts across the street, then she's in your hands.

So—please drive slowly past the schools and intersections—and remember that children run from behind parked cars. Please don't run over my little girl. Mr. Any Father.

Alcorn Bows In 147-lb. Thriller

Claude Lawrence, St. Mary's senior featherweight champion of 1947, last night advanced a step nearer this year's lightweight crown by outpointing game Joe Jennings of the Merrick Club in the feature of the AAU boxing tournament at Turner's Arena.

Lawrence, a rugged and heavy puncher, staggered Jennings in the second round after the Merrick boy had held him even in the opening stanza. Lawrence was in command most of that second round, but in th third, Jennings managed to connect with some good blows. However, Lawrence came on again and at the finish had the best of the going.

Manager Joe Kuhel beamed at the display and the two rookies moved up several notches in his esteem.

Trot Racing Faces Delay

Baltimore, March 9 (AP).—A decision whether harness racing with pari-mutuel betting would make its debut in Maryland this year was postponed today by the State Racing Commission.

The commission met with spokesmen for three groups granted temporary licenses to hear reports of their building progress. All reported they were stymied by the Federal Government ban on materials for amusements projects.

The license holders reported they still held hopes for lifting of the ban by April 1 and Commission Chairman Stuart S. Janney called another meeting for that date. He intimated it would be decided then if harness racing is possible in Maryland next summer.

Rhode, Levin Wrestle Tonight

Wrestler Dutch Rhode won his dispute with former Champ Dave Levin over the length of their bout at Turner's Arena tonight. The bout will be, as usual, a one hour time limit affair, despite Levin's plea for a fight to the finish.

Billy Darnell and Mike Kollins will clash in an added feature tonight. The four-man free-for-all will pit Marva Mercer and Benito Gardini against Faro Rinaldi and Harry Finkelstein. Jimmy Burnett and Francois Miquette will open the show at 8:45.

CIAA Cage Play Opens Here Today

The third annual Colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association basketball tournament starts tomorrow afternoon with eight teams taking part at Turner's Arena.

In first-round games, N. C. State meets Delaware State and Howard faces Virginia State in afternoon games starting at 3 p. m. At 8 p. m., Union clashes with Winston-Salem Teachers and West Virginia plays Johnson C. Smith.

Chamberlain Bows

Chamberlain School closed out its 1947-48 basketball schedule last night with a 53-44 loss to Stuyvesant, of Warrenton, Va., on the local floor. The defeat gave Chamberlain a record of 14 won and six lost this season.

N. Y. Ranger Kicked Out

played both as center and wingman.

In his statement, Campbell said Taylor was "interested with Tamer in a wager" or the outcome of a game played in Chicago February 18 between the Boston Bruins and the Chicago Blackhawks.

"Taylor's interest in this wager," Campbell said, "was that he authorized Tamer to place for him a bet of $500 on the Chicago Blackhawks."

Boston, however, won the game 4 to 2.

It was Tamer's arrest last month as a parole violator that set off the probe of charges of gambling by hockey players. Campbell visited Tamer last week at Southern Michigan Prison during an investigation trip.

In New York, Gen. John Reed Kilpatrick said the Rangers had no intentions of appealing Taylor's expulsion.

"We are naturally shocked," said the president of Madison Square Garden, owner of the Rangers." He added:

"We are confident, however, that Campbell would not have taken this drastic action without a thorough and unbiased investigation and we have no intentions of appealing."

Weston W. Adams, president of the Boston Bruins, said Gallinger had been taken off the payroll but that the club would file an appeal from the suspension "if Gally wants it."

"Of course," said Adams, "I hope he's exonerated, but we want the facts either way. The case is not closed."

Advised of the suspension, Gallinger told a reporter in Boston that "I'm innocent." He said he would appeal the ruling "to clear my name," and added he had been promised a "fair shake" by the league president.

President Campbell said the investigation had established "to my complete satisfaction" that no other player in the league was involved in any manner.

Campbell said there had not been any charge of "fixing" or attempting to "fix" a hockey game.

Pleads Guilty Of Joy Riding

The Washington Post

SHIRLEY MAE BLUE,

of 2411 N. 18th st., Arlington, Va., pleaded guilty in District Municipal Court yesterday to a joy-riding charge, was placed on $300 bond and was sent to the probation officer pending sentence March 23. Miss Blue, 18, told police she had gone riding with friends and that one of them turned the wheel over to her. She did not know the car had been stolen from a New York ave. filling station, she said.

Bandit Caught, Identified

bloodstains on the front seat and in the back, police said.

In a garage they said he rented two weeks ago they found a .30-caliber rifle, a blackjack, stolen Maryland and Washington license plates, 10 pairs of handcuffs and ammunition.

Fierst, taken without a struggle although he carried a .45 caliber pistol when arrested, police said, had healing bullet wounds in the face, neck and shoulder.

Washington police had issued photos of him when a general lookout was posted for him after the Washington robberies.

Immediately after his arrest, Detective Sergts. Nunzio Bonaccorsy and Otto Fuss went to Baltimore with Francis W. Feagans, manager of the Super Market, and Allie Sidney, a driver for the printing firm. Feagans and Sidney identified him as one of the men in the payroll holdups.

Two unmasked men got the $3000 payroll from Feagans at 4:25 p.m. September 27. The printing firm money was taken from William Webster, assistant comptroller, and Sidney on the steps of the building about 11:30 a.m. on December 19.

What is Sour Mash Bourbon?

"Sour Mash" is a type of whiskey distilled in the traditional, native Kentucky manner, which brought this state its fame for fine bourbon. It requires more time and is the most expensive bourbon whiskey made.

"Sour mash" bourbon is not sour, but is smooth, fragrant, and full-flavored when made on a good formula by a distiller with the knowledge of this old-fashioned method.

When you see "Sour Mash" on the label of a reputable distiller, it is your assurance of quality. Few labels today carry the proud legend "Genuine Sour Mash" as does Old Fitzgerald—Kentucky's Favorite Bonded Bourbon.

Dairies Deny Price Fixing with prices keyed to New York butter prices.

The view of the Justice Department's antitrust division, which brought the milk case before the grand jury, is that such milk classification is not legal outside a Federal marketing run.

A division attorney said yesterday that under present operations, "prices are not keyed to anything, there are no price changes."

Effect of this action, the indictment said, is to limit the amount of milk which can be sold as fluid milk, maintaining a high price.

Commenting on the indictment, John F. Hillyard, attorney for Wakefield Dairy, said:

"They (the Justice Department) blame the distributors for high prices of milk in this area, when the Federal Government itself ordered increases to producers several times while the marketing order was in effect, and in 1946 the Federal Government caused milk to go up three cents per quart by cancelling the subsidies."

Business "Highly Competitive"

Declaring that "competition is greater in our line than in any other business in this city," with dairy profits smaller than any other place in the country, Hillyard added:

"It appears the Department of Justice wishes to smash the association of producers and destroy the Dirtict of Columbia health regulation and that we are brought into the picture for publicity purposes."

Thompson's Dairy, said A. L. Thompson, president of the firm, at no time attempted to set milk policies of any regulating body, "nor were we asked for our opinion, nor did we agree to the abandonment of the Federal Milk Marketing Order in this area."

Sale and distribution of milk here, he said, "always has been and is at the present time a highly competitive business."

Indictment Called Shocking

M. H. Burchell, secretary-treasurer of Alexandria Dairy Products Co., said he was "shocked" at the implications of the indictment. Pointing out that his dairy operates only in Virginia, he said, "The law requires the State Milk Commission to set the price for both the consumer and the farmer.

"The Government recognized the distribution problem," he said, "when it helped create farm cooperatives and dictated prices to be paid for low bacteria count and high butterfat content . . . I get awfully steamed up over the unfairness of this indictment. We don't conspire, agree or team up with anybody on prices . . ."

While the Justice Department has said it will seek "an early trial" in the milk case, through the normal legal course it will be some time before the case actually reaches court.

The milk indictment is part of the department's announced policy of investigating prices of food, clothing and housing. An antitrust division official said yesterday, however, that insofar as further local action on food cases is concerned, no other food cases "are ready now, or in the immediate future" for grand jury presentation here.

13 Quit ITU 'For Refusal To Obey Laws'

Waukegan, Ill., March 9 (AP).—Thirteen of 20 printers employed by the Waukegan News-Sun, a daily newspaper, resigned today from the AFL-International Typographical Union in protest against the ITU's employer relations policy.

In a letter to R. A. Hawks, president of the ITU's Waukegan Typographical Union Local 294, the resigning members said "we object to the policy of the officers of the International Typographical Union in their refusal to obey the laws of our Nation."

The resignations followed notice by the ITU executive council of a special 4½ per cent strike assessment of union members' wages to support printers on strike against newspapers in Chicago and some other cities.

"The union dues the past year have been in excess of 2½ per cent of our gross earnings," the letter of resignation said. "Now, these dues have been increased in excess of per cent in order to supply funds to fight the United States Government.

"We will not contribute to any funds to be used to destroy our country's laws.

"We are American citizens first."

The 13 printers notified F. Ward Just, general manager of the newspaper, that "the union no longer represents us for the purpose of collective bargaining or in any other capacity."

Law Allows Rejection For Race, Witness Says

Indianapolis, March 9, (AP).—A witness for the International Typographical Union testified in Federal Court today that he told Detroit newspaper publishers the Taft-Hartley law allows them to reject a job applicant because of race, religion, or kind of clothing.

A Government lawyer who is seeking an injunction against the ITU promptly accused the witness, Max Burns, of proposing "excuses" by which publishers could get out of hiring nonunion men.

Burns denied this. He said he was only making an observation to show the publishers "the wrongness of the law."

He said Congress prohibited discrimination against nonunion men when it should have been prohibiting discrimination against people for racial, or religious reasons.

Burns is president of the Detroit Mailers Union, an ITU local. The office of the general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board has asked Federal Judge Luther M. Swygert to order the ITU not to try to cause newspaper publishers to discriminate against nonunion men in hiring workers.

Burns was asked what would happen if a newspaper hired a nonunion printer.

He replied that if anything occurred through no fault of the publisher—that is if forced by the law to hire a nonunion man—"we'd be darned fools to upset the apple cart."

Winthrop Jones, Government lawyer cross-examining Burns, quoted ITU President Woodruff Randolph as telling Detroit publishers November 24 that the union had five objectives:

Not to work with nonunion men; not to work with nonunion materials; not to have its jurisdiction interfered with; to refrain from signing contracts; and to get a wage increase.

Man Taking Driver's Test Kills Pedestrian

Louisville, Ky., March 9 (AP). Clarence Lusher, 65, hotel cook, was struck and killed today by an automobile operated by a young student driver.

Edgar L. Morton, 21, was charged with manslaughter and reckless driving.

He said he was taking a driver's license test and that State Highway Patrolman Frank Duncan was with him at the time of the accident. Duncan declined to comment.

Guatemalan Notes Rejected by Britain

London, March 9 (U.P.).—Britain rejected two Guatemalan notes of protest today, saying the government intended to carry on development in British Honduras and that Guatemala could take any claim to the International Court.

The British note answered a Guatemalan note of January 21 protesting settlement of immigrants in British Honduras and a note of February 7 protesting the future federation of British territories in the Caribbean Sea.

On the Town

THERE was many a bump, shimmy and kick when the Romany Room reopened last night under new management . . . After Paul and David Young closed the known spot last year, rumors ran their usual course as to who was going to open there, when, and with what . . . Willie Biron, who has been in and out of the bistro business for some years, decided that the town needed a rhumba spot, so he booked Tito Rodriguez and his orchestra and opened up . . . Tito played with Xavier Cugat and a number of other top Latin bands, so you can count on authentic south of the border rhythms.

MISS SANTA

The Balalaika is now featuring Chio and the China Doll in a continental revue . . . She is a winsome looking girl and no slouch on the dance floor.

Club Kavakos is offering Helen Forrest with Dean Henderson's orchestra tomorrow night . . . Tonight will be the last night there for Larry Clinton, and before he leaves town we'd like to suggest that Larry look a little more interested when his band is playing background music for some of the other acts . . . Remember some of the comedians who are just on their way up now have a knack of hitting the top amazingly fast, and they can lend a helping hand, even to orchestras.

CLIFF "UKELELE IKE" EDWARDS has followed the road to the Capital and is headlining the show at Club Cairo. Georgie Tapps, the dancer, does a series which he featured on Broadway, where he was in "I'd Rather Be Right" and "Pal Joey" . . . In addition the Cairo will have two singers this week . . . They're Kay Vernon (the lass who gave up a law career because she wanted to sing) and Arno Bennett.

Elma Santa is still drawing people into the Windsor Room with her accordion playing . . . Not content to just handle the squeeze box, she sat down and composed two successful numbers, "Accordion" and "Ohio Valley," both of which have been recorded . . . Not bad for a girl of 24.

Bill Thompson and his trio at the Neptune Room were honored with an exclusive first copy of the song, "Toolie, Oolie, Doolie," which has been sweeping the country, so if you hear any weird noises resembling a bit of Americanized yodeling don't let it worry you, it's only the Thompson Trio cutting loose with a bit of Alp song.

The Mayflower will be opening the new Town and Country Room Friday afternoon . . . According to reports, it's very much swank, having been designed by Walker and Poor, who did the lounge . . . and while we're in the lounge, Pierson Thal, the usually intrepid leader of the orchestra, is now busily engaged gnawing his nails to the elbows . . . Wonder why? The show in the Mayflower could be put on half an hour or so earlier to give those planning to dress for dinner a chance to do so without having to generate themselves into human dynamos of action . . . Just a suggestion.

Civil Service Groups In Senate, House Study Pay Proposals

Federal pay raises through revision of the Classification Act received serious attention yesterday from both the Senate and House Civil Service Committees.

In fact, the Senate committee, in executive session, authorized Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) to draw up an omnibus pay bill which would:

Raise the salaries of the 820,000 employes covered by that act by an average of $51. a year; give postal employes a flat increase of no less than $400 each; raise the Classification Act ceiling from $10,000 to $12,500, and give $5000 increases to Cabinet members and other Federal officials.

The Flanders plan will be debated by the committee in another closed session tomorrow. A committee member made this comment on it: "It's the kind of a bill that would get quick approval of the Senate."

Also, there's sound reason to believe that the President would not oppose the Flanders bill. On the other hand, there's good reason to believe he would veto a flat $800 or $1000 bill.

The Classification Act revision approach to pay raises was opened up before the House committee by Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employees. Steward, however, asked that the average salary be increased by $800. He also urged:

A minimum of $2400 for adult full-time employes; a single salary scale for all employes; the abolition of overlapping grades, and lifting the Classification Act ceiling from $10,000 to $15,000. In addition, he proposed three in-grades raises for those employes who reach the top of the three lowest grades.

"While increases would not be identical in every instance," Steward said, "it is imperatively necessary that the rates be brought into a proper line, and that no further simple plaster treatment be applied with its effect of further distorting the whole salary structure and making its administration difficult to the point of impossibility."

Steward emphasized that Classification Act overhauling could be a simple and easy task.

James Burns, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, clashed with this view. He took the position that Classification Act revision would be time-consuming; he said Federal workers were "desperate" for pay raises and that this was an emergency problem that had to be met quickly. He urged a flat $800 increase for all employes.

Burns said the average Federal worker requires a 27 per cent increase in pay to offset soaring living costs. And 27 per cent of $3000—the average Federal salary—is about $800. Burns defended his plea on that basis.

The spokesman for CIO's left-wing United Public Workers, Arthur Stein, urged a flat increase of $1000 for all employes. He also expressed a fear that Classification Act revision might delay pay raises.

Based on Government figures, Stein said to restore 1939 buying power to a CAF-3 he had to be given a $625 increase; $780 to a CAF-5; $1054 to a CAF-7, and $1328 to a CAF-9.

Increases to be proposed in the Flanders bill by revising the Classification Act to give the 820,000 employes under it an average increase of $517 a year.

Woman Dies When Auto Plunges Into Creek

Death of Marine's Wife in Virginia Crash Believed Due to Drowning

A Marine sergeant's wife met death, apparently by drowning, and he was seriously hurt early yesterday when their car hurtled off the roadway into a creek south of Alexandria.

Dead when Penn Daw rescue workers reached her was Mrs. Vergeta B. Krekman, 29, of Midway Island, Va., formerly of Mercer, Pa. The car was found topside down in three feet of water.

Extricated in a dazed condition was her husband, Master Sergt. Anthony Krekman, 31, stationed at Quantico, Va. A wrecker had to hoist the sedan to permit rescue workers to remove the two.

Krekman, who police said had been driving, was taken to Bethesda Naal Hospital after treatment for shock at Alexandria Hospital. Naval physicians said he suffered possible fracture of the back and skull, concussion and head cuts.

Virginia State police at Groveton said the car had hit a concrete abutment to the bridge spanning, Dogue Run, on Route 1, just north of Fort Belvoir. It plunged 15 feet into the run, flipping over in its descent, they said.

The dead woman was mother of a 12-year-old son, Joseph Philip Shaffer, by a former marriage. She married Krekman, a mess sergeant with the Marines for eight years, a year ago. The couple lived at 22 Cannon dr., Midway Island, near Quantico.

Barred From Geneva, Guild Head Asserts

By Bert Andrews

Harry Martin, president of the American Newspaper Guild and an outspoken foe of communism, disclosed yesterday he had been told the State Department denied him a place on the American delegation to a Geneva conference on freedom of information because, years ago, he made a contribution to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Martin, a Navy veteran, who is amusement editor of the Memphis Commercial-Appeal, made the revelation over the telephone when he was asked to comment on reports that he had been denied a passport for the trip.

He said no application for a passport had been made, but added:

"At Lake Success, as representative of the International Organization of Journalists, I helped to draft the articles that will be submitted for ratification at the United Nations conference on freedom of information in Geneva.

Several people in the State Department thought so highly of my work that they wanted me on the American delegation to Geneva.

"Last Thursday I went up to Washington from Memphis for a day's discussion group meeting.

"One of the men who had been pulling most strongly for me told me he was sorry, but that my name had been rejected on the grounds that I once helped 'organize' the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

"He said they had taken my name to 'the top' three times, but that the answer was 'no' each time."

Damage to the lumber yard was estimated at $100,000. Destruction of a large number of doors was said to be a serious loss to home builders in and near Washington supplied by the company. G. U. 'Fight' Song Takes Two Old Grads Into Court

"Fight, Georgetown Men . . ."

Undergraduate nostalgia hung over Georgetown University campus like an iron balloon at 25 minutes to predawn yesterday.

Two old grads, en route to New York to raise funds for Georgetown's new Memorial Gymnasium, paused at the hallowed portals long enough to raise cain and their voices to alma mater, police complained.

"Victory again . . . raise high your shield . . ."

It was thus when Police Pvt. Frank F. Blessington was stirred out of monotony. Blessington complained that when he complained to Frederic L. Murphy, jr., 28-year-old San Francisco insurance executive, about Murphy's overzealous anthem, the old grad (Class of '32) took a poke at him.

"March right on down the field . . ."

Then, the policeman complained again, John S. Leahy, jr., 36, St. Louis attorney and Class of 1933, waded in to help the Class of 1932.

Police Pvt. Joseph A. Prell, whose Georgetown beat meets Blessington's in the 1300 block of 37th st. nw., hove into sight just in time, he said, to see Leahy running across the campus. Peril gave chase; caught him in the middle of tradition.

Murphy and Leahy, charged with assault, drunk and disorderly, were freed on $400 bond each. Their attorney, William P. Arnold, not a classmate, asked for a jury trial and Municipal Court Judge Ellen K. Raedy set it for March 22.

The defendants complained that the policeman struck them first. The policeman said they sang too loud.

Alleged Army Deserter Found in Tiny Hideout

Charlottesville, Va., March 9 (Spl.).—A 23-year-old man, accused of deserting the Army two years ago, was found last night hiding in a 3-foot-high attic room in his parents' mountain home near here.

The room, the authorities said, was furnished only with a cot. It contained a bottle of water and a pile of cigarette butts in a corner, leading police to believe the man had been hiding there for some time.

The man, identified by deputy sheriffs and military police as George Allen Frazier, was taken by military police to Richmond. The home in which he was found is in Browns Cove.

Lane Asks Cut in Jobless Levy, or Higher Benefits

Annapolis, Md., March 9 (AP).—Governor Lane today asked the State's Employment Security Board to study the possibility of reducing employers' contributions to unemployment compensation or increasing the benefits.

The Governor cited a $122,691,678 reserve in the fund as of the end of 1946 and said this was "ample proof of a very healthy condition" and indicates "the contribution rates could be reduced by the Legislature in 1949."

Governor Lane's statement was in a letter addressed to Russell S. Davis, chairman of the Employment Security Board.

Mason Changes His Mind About Firing Dr. Blades

Gallinger Battle Outlook Altered As Aide Exonerates Accused Surgeon

By Adrienne Tassler
Post Reporter

Dr. Donald Effler, who until last Friday was chief of surgical services at Gallinger Hospital, took full responsibility last night for the alleged "illegal" admission of a nonresident patient.

He declared that Dr. Brian Blades, chief surgeon at Gallinger and a critic of the hospital's administration, "had nothing to do" with the admission of Mrs. Grace Allocca, a Baltimore resident. "I want it clearly understood that I admitted the patient and I'd do it again."

Dr. Blades was accused Monday by Commissioner Guy Mason of "sneaking" in Mrs. Allocca in violation of regulations. The Commissioner said then that he would immediately seek the surgeon's removal from Gallinger.

Yesterday, however, Commissioner Mason denied he had ever promised to seek an ouster of Blades. Pressed by reporters, he commented:

"It's pretty hard to remember what I said yesterday with a multitude of things happening . . . after all, I'm no machine."

No Longer Certain

He said he was no longer certain he wanted the physician to be fired from his Gallinger post, but would decide after studying a report being prepared by Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University. Dr. Blades is also head of the surgical staff at the university hospital.

Dr. Effler, who resigned his post at Gallinger to take a better job "and not because of the controversy," said he had decided that Mrs. Allocca should be admitted to the hospital because of the "serious" nature of her illness.

Her application had been turned down by "clerks" at the hospital permit bureau, Dr. Effler said, but he arranged with John Sanderson, head of the bureau, for admission of Mrs. Allocca.

Under local regulations, an indigent, nonresident patient cannot be admitted to the hospital except in an emergency.

Mrs. Allocca is now seriously ill in the Baltimore State Sanitarium.

"I feared a hemorrhage and felt that an open case of tuberculosis would be dangerous to her family," he explained.

No Subterfuge, He Asserts

Later, Dr. Effler said, it was decided to transfer the patient to the tuberculosis ward to prepare her for surgery.

"There was no subterfuge," he said. "I felt she should be hospitalized and treated by surgery as soon as possible. Everybody agreed this should be done."

Subsequently, Dr. Effler said, the hospital permit bureau decided to seek her transfer to a Maryland institution.

Dr. Effler served under Dr. Blades at Walter Reed Hospital during the war and Dr. Blades was also his boss at Gallinger. The two are close friends.

Dr. Marvin promised to deliver a report on his findings to Commissioner Mason today. And he hinted strongly that when the facts are known the accusations will collapse. There was little doubt he would back up Dr. Blades.

Royal Family Will Make Tour Via Panama Canal

London, March 9 (NYHT).—Buckingham Palace disclosed officially today that King George VII and Queen Elizabeth will journey to and from Australia and New Zealand via the Panama Canal on next year's royal tour of the dominions.

The battleship H. M. S. Vanguard, to be used for the voyage, is too big to traverse the Suez Canal. The route via the Panama Canal will avoid taking the royal family through the rough political waters of the Middle East and India.

The tour probably will begin in February or March of next year, and is expected to last about four months. Princess Margaret Rose will accompany her parents.

12 Tons of 'Girls' Moved in Dupont Statue Shift

It's no cinch to hoist up three maidens weighing 12 tons and move them even a few yards, especially when they're collectively wearing a bowl-shaped headpiece of 15 tons.

That's a job for the men currently moving the fountain memorial to Rear Admiral Samuel Francis Dupont in the center of Dupont Circle. It will be stored in a nearby grass plot while the underpass through the circle is being built.

Officials of National Capital Parks and Planning Commission, custodians of our parks and monuments, hope that when the Dupont Circle statuary goes back to its center location in the circle—perhaps two years from now—it will be in better shape than it is now.

Vandals have removed such items as fingers and other bits from the womanly figures which aDniel Chester French, sculptor, fashioned of Italian marble to represent the sea, the wind and the stars. Several chips also appear in the Georgia marble curbing which rings the fountain statuary, and these, at least, will be repaired, according to T. S. Jett, chief of the memorials division of NCPPC. Repair of the statutes would be a little tougher, he said.

The monument, erected in 1921 to replace a bronze figure of the Mexican War and Civil War admiral, will be removed, probably this week, in three pieces. First, a wooden cradle being built under the fountain bowl on top will lift off that giant cup—15 feet in diameter—by the use of a crane.

Next, the statuary, protected with burlap and crating, will be hoisted. The 8-ton base will follow.

The fountain monument was planned by Henry Bacon, later the architect for the Lincoln Memorial. Its cost, estimated at between $75,000 to $100,000, was paid by the du Pont family when one member developed an aversion to a bronze statue of the admiral in the center of the circle.

Before the erection of the original statue in 1882, the circle was known as Pacific Circle.

Dupont (1803 to 1865) was the son of Paris-born Victor Marie du Pont who founded one of the manufacturing enterprises for which the family is famous.

A midshipman at 12, he helped organize the Naval Academy in 1845. Fort Dupont in Southeast Washington, part of the city's Civil War defenses, was named after the admiral.

MARBLE MAIDENS GO INTO REPOSE—Removing the curbing (arrow) which rings the fountain statuary, workmen were preparing yesterday to move the marble memorial to Rear Admiral Samuel Francis Dupont from the circle bearing his name. It will be "stored" on a nearby grass plot and replaced after the circle underpass is completed

Baby Born in Cab As Dad Officiates

When the stork's in a hurry, the back seat of a taxicab can be an adequate delivery room.

Lieut. Earl W. Hauer, naval communications officer, found that out yesterday, but he and the cabbie were still shaky about the whole thing last night.

The mother, Mrs. Loretta Hauer, 29, and a 6-pound daughter, immediate principals in the excitement, were reported resting comfortably last night at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

The drama began at 4:48 a. m., when the Yellow Cab Co. radioed relay of the father's emergency call to Clair Matrin, 25, of 210 Kentucky ave. se. When Martin got to Hauer's apartment at 3872 Porter st. nw., the too, too prospective father told him: "We'd better hurry!"

"All women think it's going to be too late," said Martin encouragingly. "I've driven this maternity run plenty of times."

By then the couple was in the back and Martin was shifting into gear. A baby's cry shattered his confidence. So with the father serving as midwife, the cabby radioed for police escort, and speeded to the hospital.

Lieutenant Hauer peeled off his overcoat, then his tunic, to protect his child. Martin shrugged off his jacket and passed it back. The cab reached the hospital before arrival of the escort.

Lieutenant Hauer, who has served 14 years in the Navy, was credited with an expert assist in the birth, though he said he only had first-aid training.

Cabbie Martin waited around for the final verdict, then drove the lieutenant home (slowly) to tell 6-year-old Darrell Hauer about his new sister.

Abortion Case Nears Jury Stage

The case of Dr. Henry L. Peckham, jr., 640 Princeton pl. nw., charged with abortion, is expected to be placed in the hands of a nine-man, three-woman District Court jury today.

Yesterday, from the witness stand, the 40-year-old physician vigorously denied Government allegations that he had performed illegal operations on Mrs. Hubert Stottlemyer, formerly of Washington, now of Minnesota, January 3 and 5, 1947.

Peckham's testimony was given additional weight by three "alibi witnesses," two of whom testified that the doctor attended a dinner party at the apartment of one of his attorneys, Dorsey K. Offutt, on January 5 at the time of the second alleged violation. The other witness, Mrs. Juanita LaMay, 480 F st. sw., a patient of Dr. Peckham, said she was in his office on January 3 from 7:15 to 8:15 p. m. and saw no one resmebling Mrs. Stottlemyer.

Allegedly Taken There

(It had been previously testified that Mrs. Stottlemyer had been taken to a doctor's office in the 400 block of 8th st. se. on January 3 at about 7:30 p. m. Doctor Peckham's office is at 428 8th st. se.

At the morning session, the court room was darkened while still photos, alleged to have been made at the January 5 dinner party, were shown. One of the pictures was that of a woman identified as Miss Marie Warweg of the Cavalier Apartments.

Says He Was Present

Miss Warweg testified as to the party and told the court Dr. Peckham was present with his brother Felix. This testimony was later corroborated by Felix Peckham.

The trial, now in its seventh day, is the second involving Dr. Peckham in the last two months. Last month the physician was acquitted of charges of performing an abortion on a former sweetheart of Washington Attorney James J. Laughlin.

Woman Tells Kidnap Jury Of Beatings

A weird tale of an early morning abduction at gunpoint, of a wild ride from the District into Maryland in which her alleged abductor alternately beat her and pleated with her to marry him was told to Mrs. Alsace Lorraine McCormick, District Court jury yesterday by Mrs. Alsace Lorraine McCormick, 29.

The story was told at the trial of George Paul Harding, 36, of 3900 Macomb st. nw., who faces a possible life sentence on charges of kidnaping, assault with a deadly weapon and assault with intent to kill.

Admits Romance

Mrs. McCormick, who is separated from her husband, admitted to having been a former sweetheart of Harding.

She testified that she was forced from the car of a boy friend by Harding early in the morning of last September 26 in front of her home, 24 8th st. ne.

After she entered Harding's car, she said, he drove into nearby Maryland.

"He hit me in the head with a gun," the pretty brunette witness testified, "I think it was the butt. I heard something split, then I felt blood run down my face. He was hysterical. He slapped me and said 'so you will go to the police'—he threatened to kill me and then himself . . ."

Promised to Wed Him

Mrs. McCormick said that in response to Harding's pleas and in order to pacify him, she promised she'd marry him.

She said he then drove her back to the District—to Providence Hospital where she was admitted for treatment after Harding, she said, told hospital authorities they had been involved in an auto accident.

A day later, she testified, Harding sneaked into th ehospital at 4 a. m. and slapped her as she lay in bed. She screamed, she said, and he fled.

Mrs. McCormick's story as to the hospital attack was corroborated by Mrs. Mildred Mae Bryant, 1264 Raum st. ne., who said she was a patient in the same room. Mrs. Bryant couldn't identify Harding but she said she was awakened by a scream and saw a man standing in the room. "He left immediately and fast," she testified.

Prosecutor William Hitz said yesterday he expected to "wrap up" the Government's case today. Attorney Charles E. Ford is representing Harding.

He was in the pulpit on the historic Sunday morning of April 2, 1865, when Jefferson Davis, president of the confederacy, was called from worship by a courier who told him Richmond was being evacuated.

Enlisted as Private

Colonel Minnigerode began his Army career in 1902, when he enlisted as a private. He participated in the heavy fighting against the Moros in the Philippines insurrection, serving under Gen. John J. Pershing, then a brigadier general.

In 1934, his health began to fail and he went to the Southwest, where he spent the rest of his life. Since 1940, he had lived near Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio.

Military funeral services will be held in San Antonio today.

He is survived by his widow, the former Patricia O'Brien of San Francisco; two daughters, Mrs. Arthur Ponsonby of London and Mrs. Rene Bouet-Willaumez of New York, and his brother.

In Infancy, Baby Boy Wore Long Nightgowns And Father Called Him 'Gus,' After Cartoon Character; Name Sticks, to Mother's Dismay

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: When our daughter was born six years ago, my husband named her Virginia Anne, for his sister and mother, with my consent, and she has been "Ginny" to everyone from that day since.

Then a little over two years ago our son was born and we christened him Carlyle Alan (after my father and husband), a name agreed upon long before he arrived.

However, my husband soon dubbed him "Gus," because in his long white nightgowns he resembled "Gus the Ghost," a character in the comic strip "Barnaby."

It seemed very amusing at first to have my husband laughingly tell friends why Carlyle was called Gus. But now our son is walking and talking and has long since grown into pajamas, and still his father calls him "Gus," and I have begun to realize that such a nickname might permanently stick.

Are Mother's Qualms Silly?

CARLYLE has begun to call himself "Gus," whenever anyone asks him to tell his name, and I have asked my husband several times to stop the nonsense, but his favorite objection to calling Carlyle by his rightful name is this: "We have never called Virginia anything but Ginny, and Carlyle is too formal for such a little boy, so why not let him be "Gus?"

As yet I haven't made an issue of it, because I sometimes feel I may be attaching undue importance to my wish to have Carlyle called by his own name. Am I being silly about it? Or should I take the situation firmly in hand? I shall respectfully adhere to your advice.

Since moving here last August I have become one of your regular readers; and your insight into people's problems is truly remarkable. R. T.

Man's In Love With His Joke

DEAR R. T.: This appears to be a case of a man in love with his own joke, hence determined to perpetuate it to the end of time, regardless of the effect on others.

Names are a matter of taste, I suppose, but my esthetic sense tells me that "Gus" is a coarse and characterless nickname; and I do Carlyle Alan's progenitor the honor of assuming that he didn't sire that kind of a son: coarse and characterless, I mean.

Moreover, though Shakespeare said, "What's in a name? That which we call a rose by any other name would smell as sweet," I disagree with the sentiment as applied to persons.

I think, nay I profoundly believe, that name, like appearance, interacts subtly and powerfully on human personality in formative years; and that the subjective results of this interaction will be for better or for worse, in affecting the individual's whole destiny, depending upon the quality, pitch or nuances of others' reactions to these familiar attributes of the "outer self."

And depending also, I might add, on whether intuitive self-sense agrees that the name, in particular, synchronizes with indwelling spirit or temperment, as was the rule in Old Testament times. And I think most people have a "sense" as to whether their names are apposite or incongruous to the way they feel about themselves.

Friends Bestow Real Nicknames

HERE I will hazard a guess that the custom of nicknaming probably developed in consequence of people's recognizing that somebody or other was unsuitably named and giving him offhand a more interpretative monicker; because in general, graphic nicknames, usually conferred by schoolmates in youth or by conferees in adult years, are a manifesto of affectionate regard for special quality and so construed.

Now back to Carlyle Alan: Aside from the crudity of "Gus" as a nickname, his father's derisive or snickering pitch in using it, also your active chagrin about it, also (I presume) the giggles or goggles with which it is greeted by other folks just learning his name from his lips, all combine to make "Gus" a pretty heavy psychological handicap for the lad to carry.

Also, since he comes of stock which yields the proud names of Carlyle and Alan, it's safe to bet that "Gus" doesn't fit any facet of his make-up, and in view of all this, I firmly indorse your heartfelt objections to your husband's wheeze. M. H.

Eating to Keep Slim Means Curbing Appetite for Sweets

By Ida Jean Kain

Eating to reduce is a pleasure! All you have to do is change your ways of eating from fattening to slimming and the excess pounds are converted into energy. The trick is to take the bulk of the calories in the protective foods which provide tissue-building materials and cut calorie corners by curbing the sugars, fats and starches which furnish fat building materials in abundance. It works like a charm, but you won't believe it without proof. Here it is . . .

The first report is from New Jersey:

"Last September, weighing 183 pounds, I sent for your 'Waist Whittling Diet.' In January I weighed 150 pounds. I used to wear a size 22½ and I now wear a size 16½. I feel 10 years younger . . . I'm 40. And I'm told I look much younger than before. I can't thank you enough for helping me so much. Before I started your diet I craved sweets . . . but no more! Please tell me how to stay at normal weight and which foods to increase."

She feels 30 at 40 . . . wonderful! And she no longer craves sweets! To stay at normal weight and to keep feeling young, our model should go right along with these new food habits, adding another fruit or two, a larger serving of meat—but without the fat, having another vegetable, an extra slice of whole grain bread and butter. That's the beauty of slimming down on the right diet . . . food habits are changed for good, and keeping slim is a certainty.

The second report is from New York State.

"I am glad to say that I have lost 71 pounds in seven months . . . your column has meant a great deal to me and I shall continue to follow it. . . ."

That's fast reducing. Actually it is better to take a full year to take off that much weight. However, it proves that reducing is a mathematical procedure. Four thousand calories make a pound of fat. Keeping the daily calories at 1100 to 1200 deletes at least 1000 calories . . . since the normal requirements are 2200 for the sedentary person and 2500 for the moderately active person. That adds up to 7000 calories a week less than the requirements. Nature draws on stored fat for that amount of fuel for energy, which sets the reducing rate at 1¾ pounds a week. The "Waist Whittling Diet" contains 1100 calories a day, all in the protective foods. You can feel fit as a fiddle as the excess pounds are turned back into energy. It's pure magic . . . this science of nutrition!

Mrs. Rex H. Rhoades, treasurer general of the National Society, represented the president general, Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne, who was out of town and unable to attend the colorful function, held in the large ballroom at the Mayflower Hotel. With the 60 local chapters as hostesses, the occasion was reminiscent of prewar colorful affairs, with its pageantry of society ribbons, flags and varicolored corsages worn by guests. Every member of the group wore from one to three corsages.

Gay, effervescent Dorothy Marvin, wife of Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, presided as mistress of ceremonies. Renowned for her originality, wit and sparkling enthusiam, Mrs. Marvin had a lively jingle or pun for all.

Navy Orchestra Plays

Music was furnished by a male chorus from the National Naval Medical Center of which Lenough Anderson is director, and the United States Navy Concert Orchestra under leaders Lieut. Comdr. Charles Brendler and C. W. O. Richard Townsend. Vocal soloist was Wave Marie McLean and William T. Camerson provided several harp numbers. Other musical numbers were given by Miss Stella Werner, accordionist; and members of the Silver Shield Quartet of the Metropolitan Police Department.

Mrs. Clyde M. Hamblin headed the banquet committee and Mrs. David L. Wells the program committee. Marshal was Mrs. Arthur C. Houghton.

One of the highlights of the morning session was a program put on by the students of the Webster Americanization School, in which the local DARs take an active interest. Forty-five of the students, representing 31 nationalities, gave a group of songs and recitations under the director Mrs. Helen Kerwan-Vasa, instructor in advanced English at the school.

James T. Gallahorn, principal of the Webster Americanization School, revealed that there were eight war brides among the Americanization students putting on the program, including students from Tunisia, France, Greece, Egypt and China.

School Is Discussed

In a brief talk he explained that the purpose of the school was to teach the American way of life to foreign born who are residents here or those applying for citizenship. Also included among the pupils are temporary residents with diplomatic visas plus permanent residents who do not speak English.

"Americanization courses are needed not only by the foreign born but many of those born within our own borders," declared Gallahorn.

Most of the day's session was taken up with committee reports and balloting. Elected to serve with Mrs. Clearman, regent, were Mrs. J. D. Skinner, State vice regent; Miss Mamie Hawkins, chaplain; Miss Mildred C. Sherman, recording secretary; Miss Hilda Walker, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. Buxton Aiken, treasurer; Mrs. Helen Marshall Collins, assistant treasurer; Miss Isabel Myrth, registrar; Mrs. George D. Nolan, historian, and Mrs. Robert VanDenbergh, librarian.

New officers will be installed when the National Society of the DAR holds its annual congress here this spring.

Birth Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Maximilian E. Gevers of New York announce the birth of a daughter, Catherine Wright Gevers, at Harkness Pavilion, Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center, on March 6. Mrs. Gevers is the former Miss Marianna Dunn, daughter of James Clement Dunn, United States Ambassador to Italy, and Mrs. Dunn.

Passage Seen as Aid Abroad

Forum Discusses Civil Rights Laws

Importance of civil rights legislation and its enforcement were threshed out in a panel discussion yesterday at a luncheon meeting of the Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters, held at the YWCA. Speakers included Abe Fortas, former Undersecretary of the Interior; Dr. Alain Locke, head of Howard University's philosophy department; A. Abbott Rosen, chief, Civil Liberties Division, Department of Justice, and Miss Eleanor Boutecon, also a former member of the Justice Department's Civil Liberties Division.

Dr. Locke told the audience that passage of civil rights legislation, compatible with the President's message on the subject, would have a tremendous moral impetus abroad toward winning people to our way of life. "Such a move would make European peoples for and not against the American way of life," he declared, pointing out that lack of civil rights is fodder for Communist propaganda mills.

Leading the Way

He listed equality of opportunity and freedom of conscience as two of the most vital parts of the civil rights program. Referring to the section of the civil rights report on employment, Dr. Locke said that the Federal Government should lead the way with a high standard performance of employment without discrimination.

Fortas, speaking on the CRP's provision for "freedom of conscience and expression," explained that the President's Civil Rights Committee recommended that all groups attempting to influence public opinion announce their purpose, names of their officers and the exact amount each member contributes to the organization. He emphasized that he disapproved of that provision in the committee's report, which the President did not include in his civil rights message to Congress.

"It would mean," he said, "that every person contributing $1 to an organization would have to disclose his or her gift."

The former Undersecretary of the Interior lashed out at Representative J. Parnell Thomas and the Un-American Committee and the Government's loyalty investigations.

"Congressional investigations and harassment is driving high type men from Government service," he declared. "Already there is a corrosive deterioration of personnel in government. What is going on in government is not just a Washington problem but is spreading throughout the country, infecting people with hysteria and fear. There's a tremendous force here out to destroy middle groups."

Remarking that she was the sole protector of Jehovah's Witnesses for a while during the war, Miss Boutecon declared that she knew the problems of defending the rights of minorities and religious sects.

Basic Rights Denied

She listed the right to vote and the right to bear arms as two of the most significant basic civil rights denied the Negroes. She said that some of the discriminations against the Negro in the Army, Navy and Marine had been eliminated during the war but contended that the paucity of Negro officers evidences remnants of discrimination. "In the armed forces it was easy to end discriminations based on color, race and creed because appropriations are controlled by the Federal Government."

Rosen explained the functions of the Justice Department's Civil Liberties Division. He said the present staff of eight lawyers and three secretaries is too small to enforce violations of civil liberty laws.

Mrs. A. P. Gayol, chairman of the league's minorities committee, presided over the panel discussions, and Mrs. John F. Thomas, league president, presided at the business session when league members passed a resolution calling upon the House and Senate Foreign Affairs Committees to report out the ERP bills immediately for congressional action.

Success Story in Plays, Parties

Just Before Spring Notes On New York's Favorites, 'Mr. Roberts', Tibet's Art

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

NEW YORK.—Spring's just around the corner in chilly New York but well-fixed ladies are debuting in second editions of the new look. Sun worshippers are returning, bronzed, irritatingly healthy. The welkin has been rung loud and often for British refugees homegoing from vacations in sterling area tropical spots.

MRS. LUCE

Biggest Broadway success is mild-mannered Henry Fonda playing tough in "Mr. Roberts." Now that the play is established indefinitely, Mrs. Fonda and the kiddies are returning from California exile. She's the former Frances Seymour, blonde, pretty and once married to Clare Luce's first husband, George Brokaw.

Former Representative Luce is winging back. Paid a trifling $100,000 for a three-month's stint of Hollywood slavery, Clare was to adapt "The Screwtape Letters." But, what with the falling box office, cinema moguls decided the opus too intellectual so she substituted an original story.

Hit on Television

NEWEST television success is Millicent Hammond Fenwick, daughter of former Ambassador to Spain, Ogden Hammond. Millicent, who toils on Vogue and is publishing a new etiquette book in September, is televised evenings from 8:00 to 8:30 over WNBT. She appears with John McCaffery who has done such programs as "Room 416" and "Author Meets Critic." Their program is a televised magazine taking up everything from New Look to Juvenile Delinquency and even including the Danish Symphony Orchestra. Most social art world event was the opening at Carroll Carstairs Gallery of Kathleen Mann's exhibition of portraits and landscapes. She is a daughter of Portraitist Harrington Mann.

False Fronts Deflated

BRITISH Actress Leonora Corbett, who settled here after starring in Noel Coward's "Blithe Spirit," besides achieving sartorial recognition as one of our 10 "best dressed," has also turned literary. She's written a play depicting her life to some extent. It has a male chorus, incidentally. Leonora won't appear in it, though. She's doing a comedy in the fall instead. In her last show, a musical comedy called "Park Avenue," Leonora was so impressed with deceptive figure buildups used by chorus girls that she tried to insert a program note "the Corbett bosom by courtesy of her Father and Mother."

Elsa Maxwell Fetes Designer

ELSA MAXWELL as usual has been up to her ears in foreign imports. Her latest party was smallish—a dinner for 60 honoring Paris' and London's couturier, Captain Edward Molyneaux. Captain Molyneaux tarried in Gotham just long enough to launch a new perfume called "Magnificence." Among the guests was Lady Sheila Milbanke who trotted South to sojourn with the Windsors.

Miss Chase

On the library front Ilka Chase is publishing soon a sequel to her "Past Imperfect." This first Chase epic was the story of her earlier life, loves and work. Since then La Chase has acquired both a new husband, several new varieties of career and more literary experience.

On the diplomatic front handsome Bill Pawley, who was offered the Paris Ambassadorship and turned it down, is returning to his Embassy in Rio in Brazil. He'll probably hand in his resignation then stop on for the Bogota conference on his way north.

The iron curtain note is cabled news that Authoress Marcia Davenport, no admirer of Communists, managed to squeak out of Prague just before the curtain clanged down.

A Leap Year item is that at New York's party at the Colony Club, on which Washington's Sulgrave Club affair was patterned, the ladies sent their men floral leis instead of boutonnieres. As a result it was almost impossible to dance with the most popular gents. Literary lion of the moment is Fred Owen, editor of London's Daily Mail. He talked on the Herald Tribune's forum of the air, liked it so much it will probably be duplicated for his paper.

Intellectual Goings On

MOST unusual intellectual going on in town is the Tibetan exhibit at the Asia Institute. It is the first comprehensive showing of Tibetan art and culture in this country. Paintings, all sorts of art works have been assembled from museums and private collections. Suydam Cutting showed his remarkable color films taken on his expeditions to Tibet. Mrs. Cutting, dressed in an amazing local costume, was narrator for the film. The crowd was so great the exhibits could hardly be seen and the curious refreshments consisted of almond paste cakes and grapejuice spiked with rum. Perfectionists were terribly disappointed as they expected a slug or two of yak's milk.

Mrs. Winslow Has Exhibit Of Paintings

Mrs. Randolph Winslow, known in art circles as Marcella Comas, will exhibit her paintings at the United Nations Club today. The show, which consists of portraits of writers, poets and prominent persons, will continue through March 28.

At the opening today, friends of the artist who will assist include Mrs. H. Russell Bishop, Mrs. Francis Winslow, Mrs. Matthew Smith, Mrs. Raymond Cox, Mrs. John S. Hogland, 2d, Mrs. Kenneth Fields and Mrs. Winslow's sister, Mrs. James Menton Malone.

Portraits have been loaned to the exhibit by Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Philip Fleming, Mrs. Anthony Biddle, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Anne Archbold, Mrs. L. M. C. Smith and Mrs. Lucius Clay, jr.

Mrs. Winslow lives in Georgetown, has two young children, Mary, 12, and John, aged 9. She is the widow of Colonel Winslow, and her father is the late John T. Comas of Pittsburgh, a nationally known ecclesiastical architect.

The artist has studied here and abroad, and has exhibited at the Corcoran, the Phillips and the Whyte galleries.

Mrs. Goodman Hostess

Mrs. Max Goodman entertained a large company of friends at luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham.

Earl of Southesk Leaves for South

The Earl of Southesk and his young son, Lord Carnegie, who have been visitors at the Mayflower for several days, left yesterday for Palm Beach and will go from there to Nassau and Jamaica.

In this country for the first time, Sir Charles Alexander Carnegie, eleventh Earl of Southesk, was entertained at luncheon on Sunday by Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris and was guest of honor at a small dinner which Senator and Mrs. Brien McMahon had last week.

The British visitor is a widower. His wife, Princess Maud, granddaughter of Queen Victoria, died in 1945.

If the apparently good percolator suddenly starts to make very weak coffee, look at the section which holds the coffee grounds and see if the tiny holes are not plugged up tightly with sediment. Hot Cross Buns Have History

Although hot cross buns are accepted as a standard food during the Lenten season, few consumers are aware of the religious significance attached to them. As a matter of fact, the origin of the hot cross bun has never been definitely established, except for the general agreement that for centuries the cross—formed with icing atop the spicy bun—has been used to commemorate the crucifixion of Christ.

In medieval times it was the custom of persons to mark dough with a cross in order to ward off witches, according to one theory. Another hypothesis is that the Egyptians marked foods with a cross at all feasts to the gods. Regardless of these possible ancient practices, the mark of the cross on the bun gradually became a sign of the Christian faith, and the food was distributed after services on Easter Sunday.

For centuries, bakers vied with each other in making the hot cross bun, and during the middle nineteenth century in England the food became so popular that two bakeries in Chelsea were thronged from daylight to dusk with people from all parts of London who came to taste the "Lenten bread." American bakers today specialize in their production throughout the Lenten season and the buns with the white cross are on tables in homes all over the United States during this period.

Ask Anne — Your Questions on Homemaking

My young son pushed a marble into the neck of an old hobnail vinegar cruet. Is there any way I can get it out? I tried getting the marble cold with ice then heating the cruet with hot water.
E. B.

Here's an idea which might work if you can force the marble on down into the cruet. Soap or oil the inside of the neck and drop a strong double string with a knot on the end into the bottle. Be sure to leave at least a foot of the string out of the bottle for pulling. Now, invert the bottle so that the marble drops into the neck with the string on one side also in the neck. Pull on the string with the cruet inverted. The pressure of the pull on the knot at the back of the marble might be enough to dislodge it.

If you can't force the marble into the bottle, your best chance of removing it would be to pour glycerine around it, allow to stand a few hours and try pushing it out with a darning needle or crochet hook or some similar sharp, small instrument.

I have just bought a small 4-room house and, as I work, have arranged for a "green" maid to clean it for me, once a week. Will you tell me how to best instruct her to do this? I mean: Should she vacuum the rugs first, or what? Would the kitchen and bathroom be taken care of last? And how about the furniture? I know there is always a best way to do anything and would like to have your suggestions.
H. M. K.

Home economists of the New York Herald Tribune Home Institute suggest that, in house cleaning, the rooms be taken in the following order: (1) Living room; (2) dining room (if there is one); (3) bedrooms; (4) hall, if any; (5) kitchen.

Order of work suggested for the living room is as follows: (This assumes the possession of a vacuum cleaner.)

1. Open windows top and bottom for free circulation of air.

2. Clear surfaces for dusting, removing magazines, covers, bric-a-brac, etc.

3. Collect lamp bases and globes and any other small items that need washing or polishing.

4. Bring in cleaning equipment: Vacuum cleaner and attachments; broom; dust mop; cleaning basket holding such items as whisk broom, small soft brush for dusting carvings, etc., cotton waste for aplying polishes and cleaners, and flannel polishing cloth for buffing; two bowls of clear warm water on tray, and any other supplies needed.

5. Brush ceiling and walls, if necessary, with soft wall brush, broom wrapped in soft clean cloth, or special vacuum cleaner attachment. Dust high moldings, doors, and window frames, window shades, and Venetian blinds when necessary. Brush draperies. Dust mirrors, pictures, lighting fixtures, lamps, woodwork; wash any of these articles if necessary.

6. Dust radiators (covers and coils) or registers; clean thoroughly when necessary. Brush baseboard or use brush attachment of vacuum cleaner. Dust book shelves and books as necesary. Wash windows when necessary.

7. Remove cushions from upholstered furniture. Use brush attachment of vacuum cleaner on furniture (getting into all crevices) and cushions. Replace cushions.

8. Dust furniture; rug wood surfaces to polish; apply wax or polish as necessary. Polish metal hardware if necessary. Wash glass table tops.

9. Use vacuum cleaner or soft hair broom on floor, then dust mop. Use vacuum cleaner for thorough cleaning of rugs and carpets.

10. Polish or wash accessories and return to place with other objects removed during cleaning.

(If you have no vacuum cleaner, sweep the floor with a broom before you do the dusting.)

This outline will give you an idea about the recommended procedure. A great deal of more specific information on the house cleaning job is included in "America's Housekeeping Book," compiled by the New York Herald Tribune Home Institute, if you care to consult this book at a library or buy a copy for use in your home.

I am refinishing an old mahogany lowboy. It is now down to the wood—all the old finish removed—and I am doubtful about the next step. I have been advised not to stain it, merely to repeat several times the shellacking and sanding process. This sounds like a sort of finish I would like, and not too difficult. But I question how it will work on the carved shell design center drawer and the carved acanthus leaf on the legs. Won't the sanding cut too deeply into the raised parts and edgings on the carving, and not touch at all the deeper and recessed parts? Thank you for any suggestions you can give me.
I. W. B.

If you use a mixture of half alcohol and half shellac in finishing the piece, there'll be less likelihood of an accumulation of shellac in the carvings than with plain shellac. Apply with brush or lintless cloth. When shellac is thoroughly dry, use very fine steel wool in rubbing the hard shine off the carved portions. If necessary, this can be wrapped around an orange stick or something of the sort so that you can get it down into deep carvings. Continue to apply coats of shellac and alcohol, followed by rubbing with steel wool or sandpaper (on flat surfaces) until the pores of the wood are filled. Wax with paste wax.

THIS Lenten fish treat is made of canned salmon, coated with a tangy sauce mixture and baked to a golden brown. To make enough of the sauce for a 1-pound can of salmon, mix 2 tablespoons mayonnaise, 1 teaspoon prepared mustard, and 1 teaspoon lemon juice. Remove salmon from can without breaking it and place in shallow baking pan. Spread sauce over salmon and brown in moderately hot oven (400° F.) 20 to 30 minutes

Our asbestos shingle house has black streaks, apparently where water has dripped from drain pipes. How can these marks be removed?

Make a poultice of 1 part sal ammoniac and 4 parts whiting or other absorbent powder, moistened with household ammonia. Several applications will be necessary to remove old stains. Another method is to dissolve sal ammoniac in household ammonia and apply with a brush. After a few minutes, wash away with plenty of clear water. This staining can be prevented in the future by keeping drain pipes, gutters, etc., well painted or varnished.

I recently purchased, direct from the factory, some molded plywood chairs and tables in natural birch. I would appreciate your suggestions on the proper care of these pieces. I have not had a chance to wax this furniture, and I've noticed that the oldest chair has some rough surfaces and a crack through one layer. What process is necessary to prevent further damage to this and the other chairs? Is there any technique necessary or possible to prevent warping?

Giving your plywood the same care you would give fine furniture is the best insurance against warping and further cracking. It should not be exposed to extremes of heat or cold and should not be placed in high humidity rooms such as basement rooms. Building up a protective coat of wax on the furniture will also improve its appearance and lengthen its life. When waxing, always apply a thin layer, allowing it to dry thoroughly and then buff vigorously. The condition of the piece will be determined not so much by the number of applications of wax as by the amount of buffing which you do after application.

The rough surface and cracks in the chair you mention should be smoothed and filled, respectively, before applying wax. Smooth by rubbing lightly with sandpaper. Fill the crack with stick shellac in color to exactly match the wood. This is applied with a heated tool, such as a cheap screw driver. After the screw driver is heated, hold it to the shellac and soften it carrying it to the crack with the screw driver, working it in with fingers while warm and pliable. When hard, the excess is shaved away with a razor blade and the spot smoothed with sandpaper.

Embassy Dairy

Has Fought For Your Interests

For Many Years . . .

EMBASSY DAIRY, Washington's largest independent dairy, does NOT do business with the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, Incorporated.

Embassy Dairy is NOT one of the dairies named in the recent indictment of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association. In this indictment, the Association and seven other dairies are charged with being in a conspiracy to fix prices and restrain trade in the distribution of milk in the Greater Washington area.

We are not in accord with the spirit of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association. We feel that their methods of supplying milk have deprived both independent dairy farmers and consumers of their rights of free enterprise. We have honestly tried to protect ourselves, our loyal dairy farmers and the public at large.

Our record will stand on its own merits. We believe that our efforts in the public's behalf are worthy of your approval and make Embassy Dairy deserving of your patronage.

Red Cross Quota at 29%

The District Red Cross campaign yesterday recorded an intake of $319,309, or 29.57 per cent of its $1,080,000 goal for 1948.

Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder, in the principal address at the third report luncheon of the current drive, in the Chamber of Commerce Bldg., stressed the importance of meeting this year's quota.

Returns totaling $160,519.65, or 32.49 per cent of the $494,000 quota, were announced by the Government Unit.

The Residential Unit, under Chairman E. K. Morris, reported an intake of $31,724 to date, or 37.77 per cent of the $84,000 goal.

O. H. Ritenour, chairman of the city division, announced workers had chalked up receipts totaling $16,120, or 29.85 per cent of the $54,000 quota.

The General Business Division, under Chairman H. Randolph Maddox, announced receipt of $63,921, or 20.29 per cent of the $315,100 goal.

Margarine Battle Waged at Capitol

Rival Farmer Groups Push Their Cases On Tax Repeal Before House Committee

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Two groups of embattled farmers—dairymen and soybean and cotton seed raisers are fighting it out before the House Agriculture Committee.

Deuel

The dairymen want to keep the competitive edge they now have on margarine makers—a tax of 10 cents a pound on any butter substitute that is the same yellow color as butter.

The margarine men say the tax is unfair to them—and also to the consumer.

Eighteen bills have been introduced to abolish the tax. Even that won't get rid of all the differential, because 22 States have local laws completely forbidding the sale of any butter substitutes that look like butter.

Harsh Words at Hearing

Bitter words were exchanged yesterday as proponents of changes in the law tangled with Congressmen from dairy States who are fighting to save the tax.

At one time Chairman Clifford Hope (R., Kans.), of the committee, verbally spanked a fellow Republican member, Representative Reid Murray of Wisconsin, for "making speeches instead of asking questions."

Murray had spent an hour arguing with Dr. H. J. Deuel, jr., of the school of medicine of the University of Southern California.

Deuel had declared experiments proved that margarine was just as nourishing as butter. He thought it would be better, he said, to drink the whole milk instead of making it into butter, and substituting margarine as a spread for bread.

Debate Shut Off

Finally Hope shut off debate by telling Murray:

"You keep saying you want to ask questions, but instead you've been making speeches all morning. You haven't asked a question yet."

Murray created a stir during his argument with Deuel when he displayed a bottle of "soybean milk" he had the Department of Agriculture make for the hearing. He also produced a bar of soybean cheese, and a can of soybean milk. He didn't explain what he planned to do with the exhibits.

Deuel's testimony brought sputtering protests from Representative August H. Andresen of Minnesota, another dairying State. Andresen declared he would as soon eat lard as margarine.

Testimony on Color

Deuel and others pointed out that most of the time butter makers use coloring to stabilize the yellow of their product. On the other hand, margarine is usually naturally yellow—the color of soybean oil—and has to be bleached.

One GOP Congressman, E. A. Mitchell of Indiana, accused his fellow Republicans on the committee of conducting a "studied game of confusion." He told Andresen and Murray that most of their questions "have no bearing on the matter at hand.

"I hate to admit it," he shouted, "but the worst offenders are members of my party." When asked if he would yield to questioning, Mitchell replied: "To questioning, yes. But I'm not going to yield to any circus play."

He then told Andresen that "butter is colored yellow to look like butter. Why can't margarine be the same color? Butter doesn't own the color yellow."

Congressmen Spat

Another Congressman, Representative Robert J. Corbett (R., Pa.) resented a remark by Andresen, who declared, while Corbett was testifying:

"It's exasperating to see barefoot boys from the cities trying to ruin the best part of our agriculture."

"If we are barefoot boys," Corbett fired back, "it's taxes such as this that make us barefoot."

The law dates back to 1886. It was passed at the urging of the dairy industry to halt the rapidly growing sales of oleomargarine. Because in those days margarine largely was made of animal fats such as lard and tallow, it was called "oleo." Today little animal fat is used. Instead, soybean and cottonseed oils are employed—and the "oleo" part of the name is dropped.

Montgomery Cab Driver Gets Law Enforced for Court Test

A Montgomery County hacker yesterday urged the county commissioners to enforce the same county taxicab ordinance which in the past has been criticized by cab operators.

In effect since last July, the ordinance licensing cab operators and drivers, as well as providing uniform rates, has not been enforced. Principal reason for the delay, officials explained, is pending litigation which attacks constitutionality of the law.

After Jack S. Douglass of Washington Grove, a cab driver, asked prompt enforcement of the ordinance yesterday the commissioners agreed informally to inaugurate enforcement despite the pending litigation.

The suit was filed by Robert H. Swisher, of Takoma Park, operator of the Piney Branch Cab Co., who has refused to pay the prescribed license fees.

Swisher, through his attorney, former State's Attorney James H. Pugh, contends the ordinance is unconstitutional.

Douglass also charged that District cab drivers had picked up "as high as $35 or $40 worth of fares in Bethesda in one night."

He pointed out such a practice by county drivers in the District would result in quick arrests. President Brooke Johns also pointed to a need of revising the present county ordinance to enable police to arrest drivers violating provisions of the ordinance. At the present time, the hack inspector is charged with swearing out the warrants.

2 Medals to Marine

Marine S/Sergt. Joseph E. Cooke, 311 Gallatin st. nw., was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and Gold Star yesterday, for participating in 30 aerial combat missions during World War II as a radioman-gunner.

Maj. Gen. William J. Wallace, new director of Marine aviation, said Sergeant Cooke received the decorations for missions with Marine Bombing Squadron No. 423, which attacked Japanese installations at the Bismarck Archipelago—Solomon Islands area.

Sergeant Cooke is the son of Mrs. A. S. Cooke of Trenton, Tenn. He is now a radio recording technician in the division of public information at Marine headquarters here.

2d-Story Workers Get 300-Lb. Safe, $3400

Fredericksburg, Va., March 9 (Spl.).—A 300-pound safe containing about $3400 was stolen last night from the office of Joseph Robinson, taxicab operator. The safe was carted down a flight of outside steps from the second floor of the rear of the building in the 500 block of Princess Anne st., dropped over a back fence and apparently hauled away in a truck or automobile.

The Navy announced his appointment yesterday.

Dr. Maurer will be on leave from Carnegie Tech, where he has worked on radar techniques. He was formerly with the metallurgical laboratory of the University of Chicago, where he worked in nuclear physics.

The announcement said he will administer "an extensive fundamental research program for the Navy covering work in such fields as acoustics, optics, spectroscopy, infra red, classical electricity and magnetism, cyrogenics and studies of the solid state."

Some 70 private and Government laboratories throughout the country are conducting the Navy's research program.

2 Baby Sitters Held On Charge of Larceny

Two baby sitters, Lorenzo McCoy Cradle, 20, and Agnes Biggs, 21, both of 1850 Corcoran st. nw., were held for the grand jury Monday on a charge of grand larcency arising from the theft of $1750 worth of clothing and furniture.

The items allegedly were taken from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Flor de Lise, 1850 Wyoming ave. nw., who had employed the two. Cradle was released on $1000 bond and the girl on $500 bond set by Municipal Court Judge Ellen K. Raedy after waiving preliminary hearings.

School Broken Into

Police were informed yesterday by Helen Maguire, principal of Davis School, 46th and H sts. se., that a temporary building belonging to the school was broken into and damaged Monday.

Police found the intruders had forced a front door lock, torn electric fixtures off the walls, smashed the furniture and knocked holes in the walls.

Police believe boys broke in the building to use one of the classrooms as a makeshift basketball court.

Arlington Car License Bill Sidetracked

Richmond, Va., March 9 (Spl.).—The Senate Finance Committee today sidetracked a House-passed measure which would have permitted Arlington County to levy local taxes on automobiles.

The committee indefinitely passed by the measure, sponsored by Arlington County Delegates J. Maynard Magruder and George Damm. Such action generally is conceded tantamount to killing a bill.

In the House, the committee on Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries killed by 9 to 1 the remnants of the Crowder Bill, designed to prevent seining for rockfish during the spawning season.

The bill, introduced by Senator Charles W. Crowder of Richmond, was originated hastily after many tons of rockfish en route to spawning grounds in the Potomac River, were netted near Colonial Beach, Va. It would have prohibited the seining between February 1 and June 1.

The same committee reported favorably a bill giving the Commission of Fisheries the right to set the season for use of patent oyster tongs, but was not to exceed three months in a 3-month period. The season no wis October, November and December of each year.

Main legislative action today centered in the Senate, where that body passed a committee version of the Governor's reorganization plan with only one minor change, and sent it to the House.

Falls Church Census May Hold Up Annex

A proposed special census in Falls Church may temporarily sidetrack the town's plans to annex part of adjacent Fairfax County.

The annexation proceedings, to give the town sufficient population to become a second class city, would be unnecessary if a census showed the present population to be more than 5000—minimum figure for cities of that class in Virginia.

If the census is authorized by the Fairfax County Circuit Court, and if it confirms present population estimates, the annexation plans probably will be abandoned temporarily, town officials agreed yesterday.

The formal request, originated by the town council, probably will be filed with the court by Town Attorney LaRue Van Meter today.

Most recent estimate by town officials places the population within the corporate limits of Falls Church at 5050—more than enough to qualify the town as a second-class city. Under State law, however, the figure must be confirmed by a court-ordered census to make the change in classification official.

An effort to boost the town's status to that of a city was unsuccessful in 1945, when a special census ordered by the county court set the population at 4340.

By attaining status as a city, the town not only would eliminate the necessity for lengthy annexation proceedings, but would be relieved of the responsibility of providing municipal services to the newly acquired territory, Claude Wells, town clerk, pointed out. Such services would be required even though the town could not raise the tax rates in the new areas for at least five years under State law.

As a city of the second class, Falls Church could levy its own taxes and provide its own assessments, although it still would be required to contribute to Fairfax County for support of schools, the sheriff's office and the Circuit Court.

2d Lighthouse Keeper's Body Found in Bay

Cambridge, Md., March 9 (AP).—The second body in as many days was found floating near Smith Island in Chesapeake Bay today.

It was identified as that of Gatha F. Cottee, 44, Bell Haven, Va., keeper of the Hooper's strait lighthouse.

Cottee and Coast Guard Seaman 1/C Charles E. Palmquist, 21, of Boston, keeper of the Shark Fin Shoal light in the Lower Bay, left the lighthouse in a motor boat last December 21 to spend the Christmas holidays on the mainland. Shore witnesses said their boat "exploded" about halfway over.

Palmquist's body was found yesterday not far from the spot where Cottee's body was located today.

Prince Georges School Advisory Board Urged

A lay committee to advise the Board of Education and the County Commissioners in Prince Georges County, Md., on school matters was advocated yesterday.

A delegation consisting of Mrs. Wells Harrington, Dr. Keith Harder and Richard Downes, representing the County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations, proposed the plan to the school board and the commissioners. The board approved the plan but the commissioners postponed action, feeling school recommendations should be made to the school board alone.

Virginia Beach Engineer Enters Foreign Service

Virginia Beach, Va., March 9 (AP).—Clyde P. Nicholson, Virginia Beach town engineer, resigned today to accept an appointment in the Foreign Service of the United States Government as railway transportation and traffic officer for Austrain railways.

Nicholson, who will be attached to the United States consulate in Vienna, will leave by plane March 15.

Harrington Is Brilliant At Piano

By Paul Hume

Grace Harrington, one of the five finalists in the Rachmaninoff contest recently carried on throughout America, gave a brilliant recital last night at the Phillips Gallery.

Extremely regrettable circumstances prevented our hearing the first portion of her program, but Miss Harrington shows clearly in anything she plays that she is a phenomenal talent, with remarkable gifts for interpretation, linked to a thoroughly schooled technical equipment.

Thus her reading of the angular third sonata of Prokofieff was made worthy by her keen understanding of rhythmic accentuation, and the total melodic structure of the work. And we must commend the young artist for including such interesting and difficult American works as Alex Haieff's recent Five Pieces for Piano. These she made both clear and a delight as she brought sense out of dissonance, and did wonders with pedaling and sonorities in the fourth of the set.

If Grace Harrington at 20 plays as well as this, and if she will now submit her advanced work to a poet of the piano, to deepen her own musicianly approach to the matter of making the piano sing, she will without doubt become one of our very fine pianists. We wish her well in the forthcoming Rachmaninoff contest finals.

All-Girl Orchestra

The circumstances which delayed our hearing Miss Harrington took the form of Mr. Phil Spitalny's all-girl orchestra, choir, and miscellaneous agglomeration. The girls packed Constitution Hall. They looked sexy, at a distance, and gave out with noises appropriate to hog-calling, barn dances, and high school band contests.

Music was murdered but no one seemed to care, least of all Spitalny. The whole thing reminded us of a burlesque.

State's Attorney Named in Arundel

Annapolis, Md., March 9 (AP).—James C. Morton, jr., of Davidsonville, was appointed State's attorney for Anne Arundel County today.

Morton succeeds Judge Marvin I. Anderson, who was inducted into his judicial post today in a ceremony at the county courthouse.

Anderson, who 20 years ago served as deputy clerk of courts here, was sworn in by John Hopkins 3d, clerk of the court.

Morton will hold office until 1950. He is a Democratic delegate from Anne Arundel County and has practiced law here.

Army Asks Restoration Of Harbors Bill Cuts

By The Associated Press

Army engineers asked yesterday that the Senate restore all but one of the cutbacks made by the House in its record $538,875,000 Waterways bill.

The recommendation was made as a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee opened hearing on the floor control and rivers and harbors program for the year beginning next July 1.

The engineers' proposal would add 131 million dollars, or 25 per cent, to the House total.

The engineers asked the following amounts be restored to funds requested for the following projects in Maryland and Virginia: $100,000 for Salvage River Dam in Maryland and $500,000 to the Philpott Reservoir in Virginia, for flood control; $284,000 to Baltimore Harbor and channels appropriations and $108,000 to Norfolk, Va., harbor funds.

Cumberland Man Indicted in Tax Case

Baltimore, March 9 (AP).—Walter W. White, 48-year-old Cumberlander, was indicted by a Federal grand jury today on charges of evading a total of $73,374 in income taxes over a five-year period.

White, operator of the Queen City Novelty Co., which distributed juke boxes, amusement devices and pinball machines, was accused of filing false and fraudulent returns for the years 1941 through 1945, inclusive.

The Government said he claimed he owed $6257 in taxes for those years, while actually he should have paid $79,531.

Mother Shoots Son And Ends Own Life

Annapolis, Md., March 9 (AP).—An Anne Arundel County mother, 33, shot her 3-year-old son and killed herself, authorities reported today.

Leonard B. Smith found the bodies of his wife Dorothea and his infant son, Leonard, jr., last night when he returned to his home on Whitney's rd.

Dr. John M. Claffy, Anne Arundel County medical examiner, said it was a case of suicide and homicide.

Maryland Hearing Set On Use of Crab Pots

Annapolis, Md., March 9 (AP).—With the crabbing season just two months away, the problem of using crab pots must be faced by State oystermen.

The Tidewater Fisheries Commission announced a hearing on the crab pot question will be held March 23, at the State House.

Middies to Honor Envoy

Annapolis, Md., March 9 (AP).—Dr. Theotonio Pereira, Portuguese ambassador to the United States, will be guest of honor tomorrow at a stag dinner given by the Midshipmen's Portuguese Language Club at the Naval Academy.

Ex-GI Home Complaints Earn Eviction Threat

Baltimore, March 9 (AP).—The Moss-Rouse Loan Co. warned veterans today that it isn't to blame for their complaints of badly constructed homes and that it will take "appropriate action" if they don't keep up their mortgage payments.

Several veterans groups stopped payments on their GI loans, saying they had been cheated on poorly built new homes.

The Rouse firm said: "We did not . . . either build your house or sell it to you . . . and do not recognize any relationship between complaints against your builder and your obligation to meet your mortgage payments."

One veteran said this warning looked like possible foreclosure and eviction.

Frederick Construction Eases Housing Shortage

Frederick, Md., March 9 (Spl.).—New construction may ease the housing shortage in Frederick City and County during the current year, officials indicated today. A survey has revealed that 40 new dwelling units are under construction, nearly that many more are contemplated during 1948.

A 52-unit apartment house project west of the Frederick High School will get under way this summer.

I wouldn't be surprised if this bottle and label is pre-Civil War. It's a real old collector's item.
Mr. O'Malley says it's very modern. He—
Where did you find it, Barnaby?
My Fairy Godfather found the bottle in the haunted house—
A ramshackle old mansion up the road.
Say, I wonder if I can take this to old man Blatus. I hear he collects things like this. It may get him in the mood to listen to my advertising ideas for his line of pharmaceutical products...

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

It's Small World, but Big Enough to Get Lost In

It may be a small world, but it's still big enough for people to lose track of each other in it.

Mrs. Katie Lee Black of 1324 T st. se. would like to locate Louise Harrison. Mrs. Black (whose maiden name was Ragin) went to school with Louise back in Oklahoma—the Medio School near Tulsa.

Then Katie Lee got married and came to Washington, where she now works in the Agriculture Department. The other day a friend reported that Louise had also married, had also come to Washington, and was also working at Agriculture.

Finding Louise Harrison someplace in Agriculture's vast domain would be hard enough if she were still using that name. Finding here when you don't know her married name is even tougher—but maybe this item will help.

Here's a somewhat similar story, but with a different twist. The Slovensky family of 824 Delafield pl. nw., is trying to locate Bill and Katherine Clark.

For some reason, the Slovenskys have been getting mail intended for the Clarks. From that mail they've garnered that the Clarks used to live in Hyattsville and attended the Calvary Baptist Church.

But they can't understand why the mail is coming to their house. As the Slovenskys put it:

"We've lived here for 17 years; there's no mixup on the address because there just isn't any Delafield pl. in northeast—and there is certainly very little similarity between the names of Clark and Slovensky.

"But we're sure they'd like to see their mail, so maybe you can help us locate them."

MISCELLANY

Kenneth McDevitt of 140 Randolph pl. nw., is a civilian employe of the Department of the Army. When he stepped off the boat in Yokohama recently, he met Frances Johnson, a Government girl stationed there. Ken reports that it took about three minutes to discover that his mother and Frances' mother used to work side by side on the telephone switchboard at the Greenway Apartments on Minnesota ave. . . . Speaking of apartment houses, Alice Virginia Shaver of 21 N. Edison st., Arlington, Va., wonders whether there are any apartment developments here which permit pets. I suppose there are—but I've never heard of any. . . . Mrs. Berkeley Lockhart of 312 1st st. se. writes, "In 'Dance Ballerina, Dance' the dancer is no ballerina because she does only one pirouette. Most ballerinas can do at least five, male dancers more" . . . D. B. Harrison of 900 19th st. nw., tells me about the little boy who was sent to the grocery to get a loaf of bread—half wheat and half white. He came back with a can of Half and Half tobacco . . . William M. Stuart of 2124 I st. nw. reports that when he stepped out of his front door yesterday he was greeted by a dozen of the most raucous crows he's ever heard. He says that they're back a little ahead of schedule this year, and doesn't recall ever seeing crows here before the end of March.

REBUTTAL

Remember Charles P. Taft (Senator Bob's brother)? Charlie spent more than four years in Washington, quietly handling every war job they tossed at him.

Now he's president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and in addition is holding down his old job as Cincinnati's best-loved City Councilman.

Acting in this latter capacity, Mr. Taft answers my recent comments on Cincinnati's surly cops and obstacle course streets. He says:

"Your remarks indicate that you're a big meanie. The effect of continuous snow on the best city streets is the same throughout the country.

"If you ask your District Engineer Commissioner what it's going to cost to repair similar damage in Washington, it will startle you. [General Young's office says no estimate is available for Washington damage yet.] The damage here was more than $100,000.

"As to traffic, Washington is lucky in having been laid out according to a reasonably good plan. But I seem to recall that even Washington has its troubles.

"When it comes to the cops, however, I may have to agree with you. One also yelled at me last week."

HOLLYWOOD — Sir Charles Mendl, husband of Elsie Mendl, was signed for a role in "Mr. Peabody and the Mermaid." Last week Sir Charles met an old actor who has been unemployed for months, as a result of the current economy wave. The actor has a wife and a sick child, and their plight is a serious one . . . Sir Charles listened to this report, then phoned the studio and said that he couldn't appear in the movie. "In my place, please hire an actor who needs the job," said Mendl. "I never realized that what I thought was dillying meant taking bread from another's mouth."

LABOR DEPARTMENT: Every day the Screen Actors Guild assigned members to "observe" the picketing in the conference of studio unions' jurisdictional strike. Michael Romanoff received such an assignment. It meant being on the sidewalk, across the street from the picketers, at 7 a. m. Romanoff agreed, and asked, "What shall I wear?" . . . The other Actors Guild member assigned that morning, and who agreed to "observe" was one deemed of sufficient social status to accompany a czarist prince—Dame May Whitty.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT: Edgar Leslie, whose song hits include "Among My Souvenirs," and George Meyer, who wrote "For Me and My Gal," are the dourest members in ASCAP. For years they've sat at Lindy's and other gathering places for songwriters, and made scoffing, pessimistic comments on the state of the world . . . Leslie came to Hollywood last week to attend an ASCAP meeting. It was his first introduction to California's glorious climate. Meyer saw him off at Penn Station. His final words were, "Edgar, promise me you won't like it."

BOOK Department: John Gunther, whose "Inside U. S. A.," has been adapted into a musical by Arthur Schwartz and Howard Dietz, tells of Beatrice Lillie's agreement to star in the show. Schwartz and Dietz telephoned Miss Lillie in London, told her of their project, and Miss Lillie agreed to appear in it . . . The next day Miss Lillie phoned them from London and said: "What have you gotten me into? I went to a book-shop and bought 'Inside U. S. A.' this morning. Where are the lyrics?"

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Bashful Bass Bested by Flowers

By Drew Pearson

Deland, Fla.—Every newspaperman who takes a winter trip to Florida thinks he has to justify the jaunt by writing a powerful "think" piece on the political, economic and social future of that State—plus whether Senator Claude Pepper will be re-elected.

Pearson

I am going to vary the technique somewhat by writing first about a fisherman. Then, if we have time, I'll take up Claude Pepper, the race problem and the high cost of suntan cream.

The fisherman's name is Tom Flowers, and I consider him something of a miracle man. He's the only person in history who's been able to make me catch a fish.

Ever since I used to try to entice catfish out of the Neosho River at the age of 10 back in Kansas, I have aspired to be a fisherman. It remained an ambition not even remotely achieved. In pursuit of this ambition I have fished in all sorts of places and under all sorts of conditions, from the Virgin Islands to Maine and from the Bahamas to the Chesapeake. From our front porch in Maryland I can almost drop a line into the Potomac, but I can fish there for a full day at a time—and no luck. Other people in the same boat can haul them in, but there seems to be something allergic about my line as far as fish are concerned. When they see my bait they split their gills laughing. You can even see the water rippling with their mirth. In fact, the only time I have had the remotest luck in catching fish was tossing hand grenades into the rivers of the Balkans.

Therefore, when Mr. and Mrs. Morris McGill of Cassadaga, Fla., said they were going to take me fishing, I was polite but that was about all. I could easily have predicted that I would catch nothing, and would have been sure the prediction would boost my 83 per cent average.

That, however, was before I had met Tom Flowers.

Hull Fished Here

Tom, I was told, had fished with about every important nabob in the United States, and quite a few outside the United States. Cordell Hull once came down from Washington to fish with him, as did the editor of Field and Stream, while one man wrote all the way from South Africa to ask for a date on Tom Flowers' fishing calendar. In fact, Tom has so many fishing customers that he's booked up weeks in advance and it's about as hard getting a fishing date with him as it is getting a haircut at the millionaires' barber shop in Palm Beach.

But, despite this advance build-up, I remained unimpressed. However, being the perfect guest, I went fishing. I even got up at 4:30 a. m. and drove with Tom about 25 miles up into the jungles of the St. Johns River, arriving there before dawn.

Tom Flowers, I began to realize, was not one to take fishing preparations lightly. The time had to be right. The place had to be right. The bait had to be right. After that if you didn't catch bass, there just weren't any bass around to be caught.

I asked Tom Flowers what was the secret of his ability to catch fish. He said it was the fact that in the days when he was catching fish for his wife's market, he had to catch 'em or not eat. Fishing, said Tom, is not always a sport. It can be a grim business.

Tom has been to a lot of places, including a day shown around Washington by the then Secretary of State; but he says he would rather live in his bungalow on the banks of the St. Johns River and do what he wants to do than swap places with a newspaper columnist or Claude Pepper, or even the Secretary of State.

Probably he's right.

Oh yes—I almost forgot the point of the story. Under Tom Flowers' tutelage, I finally cast off my fishing jinx by catching eight black bass, the legal limit under the game laws of Florida.

Civil Rights in South

Southern politicoes say they are sore about the Truman civil-rights message because they had just begun to make strides to put their own house in order . . . Gov. Strom Thurman of South Carolina went all out to prosecute the white taxi-drivers who lynched a Negro near Greenville . . . Georgia, under Ellis Arnall, had abolished its poll tax . . . South Carolina was getting ready to abolish its tax . . . now, say political leaders, this progress will be reversed . . . Young Southerners don't seem worried about Truman's civil-rights program. Students at Stetson University, plus young reporters on various newspapers, said they thought it was a political tempest-in-a-teapot . . . Karl Bickel, who retired as head of the United Press because he wanted to take life easy, is now busier than ever running the town of Sarasota, plus the Ringling museum, plus the Florida Historical Society, plus any other enterprise that helps the community. Regarding race relations, Karl says: "The thing that will solve the Negro problem is high wages for field hands. When they get paid well they want to buy things. They not only improve themselves, but they also help business."

Merry-Go-Round

In Florida they say that everyone is against Senator Pepper except the voters . . . (Even those who don't like Claude admire his skill and courage). Prediction: Pepper will keep right on being Senator from Florida as long as he wants to run . . . Healthy signs of the times: Students at Stetson University are already jumping into politics. One law student, Dick Cooper, a former GI, is running for Governor; John Hathaway is running for the State Legislature; Douglas Senstrom is running for judge of Seminole County . . . Cooper, 27-year-old candidate for Governor, never misses classes, has a high scholastic record, stumps the State during weekends. He begins his speeches this way: "I'm the only candidate frank enough to admit that he has no chance of being elected." (Cooper is making a good impression, may make the grade in some future race) . . . Most Southern Democrats are cussing out Truman, but Daytona Beach Democrats decided to do more than cuss. They are organizing to instruct Florida's delegation to the Philadelphia convention for Henry Kaiser. He once worked in Daytona . . . When Ed Lagrone, a Daytona Beach veteran, was ruled out of placing insurance on a city hospital because he was away at Guadalcanal, and when Vet Phil Wagner couldn't get any Coca Cola for his new restaurant because he hadn't been around to keep up his soft-drink orders, they and many other vets organized the Veterans Business Men's Club. They stick together to see that veterans get their share of business.
